Two Years Minimum Service Asked Under Proposed Draft; Army of 900,000 Is Planned

Congress Somewhat Jolted by Requests With Sentiment Still Unformed

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Defense chiefs yesterday called for a two-year minimum period of service for men taken under the proposed stopgap draft.

Testifying on President Truman's plans to bolster American defenses, they also disclosed that the program now being whipped into shape at the Pentagon provides for a 63 per cent increase in Army strength.

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal told the Senate Armed Services Committee that a 900,000-man Army is proposed by Gen. Omar L. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff. Such a 350,000-man increase would fill out present skeletonized units all over the world and give the Nation a "mobile striking force" at home ready for action.

Services 350,000 Men Short

Expansion of the Navy and Air Force also will be asked of Congress, Forrestal said. The armed forces, he declared, are 350,000 men below the strengths set two years ago—limits which were based "upon assumptions which failed to materialize."

These, Forrestal added, were that world conditions would stabilize and speedy signing of peace treaties would permit our occupation troops to be reduced.

"After careful analysis," he went on, "the Joint Chief of Staff have recommended that the strength of the armed forces be increased. I will approve that recommendation."

Military Strength Outlined

"Available" American military strength, the defense chief said, consists of 2 1/3 divisions totaling 30,000 men, plus 24,000 supporting combat troops. In addition there are eight to nine divisions overseas, tied down to occupation duties and not organized for field service. Forrestal said Russia is reported to have "substantially" more than 100 divisions, not counting 75 divisions in her satellite countries.

He did not state what increases will be put forward for the sea and air forces. The Navy and Marine Corps are 175,000 men under authorized strength and the Air Force, 39,000.

The District of Columbia provided .6 of 1 per cent of the total number of men inducted under Selective Service in the recent war and may be expected to be called on for about the same proportion should there be another draft.

Selective Service records show that 64,243 were inducted from the District, while Maryland contributed 158,122, or 1.6 per cent of national total, and Virginia 215,553, which was 2.3 per cent of the national total.

U. S. Plans To Ask Joint Meeting in Coal Strike

Agreement Between Lewis and Operators Hoped for to Avoid Emergency Action

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

A Government attempt may be made today to arrange a meeting between John L. Lewis and Ezra Van Horn, operators' spokesman, on a way to end the soft coal strike.

It was learned last night that the Government is hesitant to invoke the national emergency procedures of the Taft-Hartley Act until every effort has been made to reach a voluntary agreement.

The call for a meeting between the mine union chief and the owners' representative, it was understood, will be undertaken by Federal Mediation Director Cyrus S. Ching. If Lewis or Van Horn refuse to meet, or if their meeting is fruitless, it appeared that the Government would have no option but to invoke the law.

Production Down 85 Per Cent.

In this event, the first step would be the appointment of a board of inquiry by President Truman. Not until it rendered a report, some days later, could the President ask the Attorney General to seek an injunction against the walkout.

The shutdown, which began Monday, has cut off 85 per cent of the Nation's coal production. Some curtailment in steel operations has already begun, and more is certain if the strike continues.

Yesterday, Government action was largely confined to two steps to conserve coal supplies now above ground:

1. The Office of Defense Transportation ordered a 25 per cent reduction in the passenger service of coal-burning railroads. This is expected to save about 12,000 tons of coal a day. The order takes effect Sunday midnight.

Since only about 45 per cent of passenger trains are coal-burning, the order will cause a reduction in passenger service of about 11 per cent. It will be felt mainly in short-haul, commuter operations.

2. The Commerce Department, acting on recently renewed war powers, ordered a flat embargo on all coal exports, except those going to Canada. This will save about 4,000,000 tons a month.

Word Expected Today

In an initial Government attempt to "explore" the coal controversy, Ching met yesterday morning with Van Horn. Later, Ching had lunch with Lewis. Still later, he conferred with Harry Moses, head of United States Steel Corp.'s "captive" coal mines and one of the industry's most influential members.

After the conferences, Ching would only say that there was "no change in the situation." There was no comment at all from the other three.

Some word was promised for today, however, by the coal operators' negotiating committee. They gathered here yesterday for a meeting, and scheduled a press conference for this morning.

Conceivably, this might relate to a move indicated by Van Horn three days ago. At that time he proposed that Lewis join him in going to court to petition for the appointment of a third, neutral, trustee for the miners welfare and retirement fund.

Lewis and Van Horn are themselves trustees, but the previous third member, Thomas E. Murray, resigned on January 31.

Van Horn told Lewis that if he did not act jointly by today to get a new man appointed, he, Van

Appeals Court Ruling

Congress Upheld in Right To Demand if Witness Is Red

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

The United States Court of Appeals in a 2-1 opinion yesterday upheld the right of the House Committee on Un-American Activities to demand tha witnesses answer questions as to Communist affiliations.

The court's opinion was expressed in a 24-page printed brief affirming the District Court's conviction last July of Dr. Edward K. Barsky and 15 other officials of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee for contempt of Congress in refusing to turn over records to the committee.

The majority view, written by Associate Justice E. Barrett Prettyman and concurred in by Associate Justice Bennett Champ Clark, declared:

"This existing machinery of government has power to inquire into potential threats to itself, not alone for the selfish reason of self-protection but . . . having been established by the people . . . for the protection of the people, it has an obligation to its creators to preserve itself . . ."

In dissenting with the majority, Associate Justice Henry W. Edgerton charged "the House Committee's investigation abridges freedom of speech and inflicts punishment without trial; and the statute (the) appellants are convicted of violating provides no ascertainable standard of guilt."

"The investigation restricts the freedom of speech," Edgerton wrote, "by uncovering and advertising expressions of unpopular views . . . This exposes men and women whose views are advertised to risks of insult . . . and lasting loss of employment . . ."

This latter, Edgerton held, constitutes "punishment" without a trial and the constitutional safeguards against self-incrimination.

The majority opinion fundamentally was based on the following:

1. Preliminary inquiry (such as committee hearings) is an "essential of the legislative process."

2. The Government has power to inquire into potential threats to itself.

3. "None of the fundamental rights is absolute; the public interest may under some circumstances outweigh even the right to life itself. It is so in regard to the right of freedom of speech . . ."

Edgerton's view was encompassed in these salient points:

1. "The issue is whether Americans may be fined for passive resistance (refusal to answer questions) to this inquest into their political and economic views."

2. The courts, and not the House committee, have been given the power to punish, he said.

3. "There is no evidence in the record that propaganda has created danger clear and present or obscure and remote, that the Government of the United States . . . will be overthrown by force or violence."

Wallace Hits Truman Plea As 'Hysteria'

Foreign Policy Now Threatening Life Of Every Human, He Says in Speech

New York, March 18 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace declared tonight President Truman now has expanded his foreign policy "to a point where it threatens the life of every human being in the world."

The third party presidential candidate also said in a prepared radio talk that the "men who are running our Government . . . hope to use the bodies of our young men to stop the demands of the people everywhere."

Wallace's address was in reply to what he termed "the hysteria-breeding speeches of St. Patrick's Day, 1948."

President Truman spoke to a joint session of Congress yesterday and to a dinner here last night, advocating universal military service, a temporary draft and speedy passage of the European Aid Program.

'Grave Issues'

The former Vice President, apparently referring to Mr. Truman's assertion that he would not accept the political support of "Henry Wallace and his Communists," said:

"One year ago I said that President Truman was the greatest salesman communism ever had.

"I repeat that charge tonight. He has ignored the deep, underlying nature of the people's problems."

The presidential aspirant asserted that "grave issues of war and peace" were raised yesterday, but declared: "These issues will not be settled by name calling."

Wallace added that "the men who are stirring up hate and fear" traffic in the word "communism" in the hope that "it will provoke a hostile response from the great masses of the people."

Wallace laid down a broad attack on all phases of American foreign policy and assailed what he said were attempts to "militarize America." He insisted there was no reason for war between the United States and Russia.

"There are some who want a holy war for the propagation of their faith," he said. "To them we must say we are against baptism by atomic bombs."

Wallace's denunciation of United States foreign policy led to his dismissal from Mr. Truman's cabinet, where he served as Secretary of Commerce.

Wallace said the crisis in world affairs had arisen "because the men who are running our Government fear the power of the common men and women the world over.

"They have recognized that the peoples of the world are on the march. They know that the peoples of France, Italy, Czechoslovakia, yes, and the peoples of China and Greece, want to try a new approach.

"Unanswered" Questions

"They are afraid of this demand for change and they are standing against it. They are using our resources, our science, our productive facilities—and soon they hope to use the bodies of our young men—to stop the demands of the people everywhere."

Wallace asked if "there is a single reason why we cannot make a peace to end the cold war?

"Is there any evidence that Russia has aggressive designs against our country or that our national security is threatened from any source?

City Officials Urge Adoption Of Sales Tax

Federal Pay Increase May Cause 8-Million Deficit, Congress Told

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Top District officials yesterday painted a gloomy picture of city finances in urging Congress to enact a general 2 per cent retail sales tax here.

What legislation their request will produce was clouded by disagreement among members who heard it, and by "if's" of other legislation.

One big other-legislation "if" was where to find the money to underwrite Federal pay increases that would apply to the District. Such an increase could cost the District eight million dollars or more a year. There's no plan for it in the budget now, and the sales tax wouldn't cover it, officials said.

Two Washington groups suggested that Congress hold up new tax laws with the idea that the search for new revenue be turned over to the proposed home rule government here.

The sales tax plan was termed "shameful" by the local CIO, and "cruel" by the local Americans for Democratic Action. The District League of Women Voters also opposed it.

U. S. Bar Unit Gives Stand Against Tamm

Senate Hearing Is Read Letter Citing His Lack Of Court Experience

A letter from the American Bar Association's special committee on judiciary was read before the Senate Judiciary Committee last night against the nomination of Edward Allen Tamm to be associate justice of District Court here.

The letter from John G. Buchanan of Pittsburgh, chairman of the Bar Association committee, was read by John J. Carmody, former president of the District Bar Association and representative of the District on the special committee.

It said that Tamm was, in effect, not a lawyer, but rather an investigator and administrator, and asserted that he had never appeared as a lawyer in court. It further said that if he was promoted for his service with the FBI, that the promotion should not come by placing him on the District bench.

"The bar of the United States awaits with interest what the committee will do," the letter said.

This comment was challenged by Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), who asked Carmody "would you not infer a little touch of threat or intimidation there?"

Carmody said he did not think Buchanan had any intention of threatening the committee.

Ten other persons indicated they were present to testify as the Senate committee opened its

Girl, 9, 'Critical' As Result of Rape Attempt in Woods

A 9-year-old girl was the victim of a serious assault and attempted rape in a wooded section near the National Arboretum, 20th and M sts. ne.

The child when found by searchers at about 7:30 p. m. was unconscious and had been badly beaten. Her clothes had been ripped off and she was wearing only shoes and stockings.

The girl, who is white, was reported in critical condition at Gallinger Hospital. All available members of the sex squad were assigned to the case.

Later a lookout was broadcast for a dark-skinned Negro, between 5 feet 8 and 5 feet 11, of stout build, wearing a gray hat, a blue topcoat or sweater and khaki trousers "that should be muddy below the knees."

'Big Inch' Pipeline Section Explodes

Petersburg, Ind., March 18 (U.P.).—The "Big Inch" pipeline, carrying natural gas, exploded tonight near Winslow, Ind., 10 miles southeast of here, and fire companies from four Pike County towns were called to fight the blaze.

Officers at the State Police post at Jasper, Ind., 30 miles from the explosion scene, reported they felt "rumblings in the ground" and could see flames in the sky.

There were no immediate reports of casualties.

Friends Heard 'Firecracker'

Six Detectives Seek Sniper Who Killed Man on Street

Homicide detectives yesterday sought a sniper-eyed gunman in the mysterious street corner slaying of 45-year-old Peter Milo, 1723 Corcoran st. nw.

Milo, an employe of the Donaldson Paving Co., 20 Potomac ave. sw., was fatally wounded while talking with two friends at 7th and P sts. nw., about 7 a. m.

He fell to the sidewalk, gasping "I've been shot," and died at Freedmen's Hospital a short time later of a bullet wound in the chest. The two friends, Charles C. Corley, 80 P st. nw., and Joseph P. Lowery, 3541 13th st. nw., told police they heard a sound "like a firecracker" an instant before Milo fell.

Lieut. Edgar E. Scott, acting head of the homicide squad, said six detectives have been assigned to the case because of its "unusual nature." He said the slayer obviously is a "crack shot," adding that the gun must have been fired from a greater distance than the width of the street. P street at that point, is about 40 feet wide.

The bullet was taken from Milo's body, but police would not disclose its caliber.

Mme. Joliot-Curie Detained By U. S. Immigration Officers

New York, March 18 (AP).—Mme. Irene Joliot-Curie, 50, noted French scientist whose parents discovered radium, was mysteriously detained by immigration authorities early tonight upon her arrival at La Guardia Field by plane from Paris.

Immigration officers declined comment, referring reporters to the airline, Air France.

Airline spokesmen said they were authorized to say only that Mme. Joliot-Curie was "being detained by immigration authorities."

Mme. Joliot-Curie, whose husband, Frederick, also is a scientist, succeeded her mother as director of the renowned Curie Institute in Paris. She is a Nobel Prize winner.

An official of the Joint anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, who was at the airport to meet her, said she had come to the United States to "acquaint the American people with the immediate needs of the Spanish Republicans in exile."

Airline representatives said they were not told why she was detained. They said they had been told she would not be available to reporters tonight.

Later, airline spokesmen said Mme. Joliot-Curie had been taken to Ellis Island. Two Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee lawyers who had come to the airport were told

House Aid Bill Provides for Ship Charter

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The House Foreign Affairs Committee revived a bitterly controversial issue yesterday by voting to permit the chartering abroad of up to 200 surplus American ships as part of the European recovery program.

Last week, under intense pressure from the maritime unions and shipowners, the Senate knocked out of its own ERP bill a similar provision for the chartering of up to 300 ships.

Representative John M. Vorys (R., Ohio), who will pilot the bill through the House next week, told reporters that the chartering would cut an estimated 100 to 200 million dollars from the cost of ERP, by reducing the carrying charges on cargoes for Europe. Representative Walter H. Judd R., Minn.), another member of the committee, said, "Nobody fails to recognize that American shipping needs a subsidy, but we felt that the European Recovery Program was no place for it."

The House committee wrote two safeguards into the proposed chartering: (1) that any charters may be cancelled by the Secretary of Defense, and (2) that the chartered ships be used primarily to carry relief and recovery supplied; Naturally, said Vorys, the chartering of ships to any country would be revoked if aid to that country were cut off.

Soviet-Backed Troops Poised On Greek Line

Force Is Estimated At 30,000 Men With Offensive Indicated

By Edward E. Bomar
Associated Press Staff Writer

Three Soviet-backed "international bricade" divisions were reported in official dispatches yesterday to be poised in the Balkans for a threatened attack across the border into Greece.

Reports from Athens to the State Department estimated the force at 30,000 men. The dispatches included other evidence that Russia's Balkan satellites may be planning a major aggressive move in Greece.

Uncertainty whether an attack actually will be launched or whether the reports are part of a Communist "war of nerves" added to official worries over a world situation which President Truman has termed "critical."

Rumors Confirmed

The dispatches gave the first firm confirmation to long current rumors that an international force has actually been recruited to support the guerillas within Greece. As summarized by responsible officials, the dispatches said:

1. The divisions are believed to number roughly about 10,000 men each, with the strongest in Yugoslovia near the Greek border, and others in Albania and Bulgaria. They are believed to be composed largely of Albanians and Greek expatriates, with a sprinkling from Yugoslavia and the other Balkan states which are backing

It was estimated here that the Soviet ground army totals about four million men, its navy about 300,000 and its air force more than 600,000.

Justice Prettyman of Appeals Court Is Ex-Newspaperman With Varied Hobbies

The Appeals Court opinion yesterday in the Barsky case which upheld the right of Congress to ask if one is a Communist was not arrived at hurriedly.

This is patent from the unruffled, methodical manner in which Associate Justice E. Barrett Prettyman, 57, who wrote the majority opinion, pulls at his pipe, reflects before answering questions.

He is an inveterate pipe smoker, this jurist who worked as a newspaperman while in law school and later after he had been admitted to the bar. A meerschaum occupies a place of honor on the mantelpiece of his chambers—the gift of a messenger who knew Prettyman when the latter was counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue years ago.

Prettyman's ruddy complexion is a clew to two of his many hobbies—fishing and golfing.

"Haven't had opportunity to golf in some time," the jurist said yesterday, "but I hope to get some in this spring."

Photography is another hobby and —reluctantly—Prettyman modestly confessed that he dabbles in water colors and oils in his spare time. His painting is exhibited only at his home.

The theater has held his interest for a long time—to the extent that he coaches amateur plays when the opportunity presents.

Like millions of other Americans he also finds relaxation at the movies—but not to the extent that he does at the theater.

An infantry captain in the First World War, Prettyman is still a "groundling" as far as plane travel is concerned.

"It's just that I enjoy travel by auto," he explained. "The occasion has never arisen when it was necessary for me to take a plane," he said. On long trips he travels by train.

Formerly corporation counsel for the District, he was appointed to opinions but only to account for funds, the majority opinion stated: "We are unable to visualize the particular in which civil rights are violated" by such a requirement.

The Barsky group had contended its objection was not based on the specific inquiry but upon the scope of possible inquiry under the resolution which created the committee.

Of this Prettyman wrote: "The problem thus presened is difficult and delicate. In it we have not only the frequent real problem of balancing the public interest against private security but in this instance we must do so in the midst of swirling currents of public emotion in both directions . . ."

The opinion went on to state that the Government has a right to "elicit the answer that the witness was a believer in communism or a member of the Communist Party . . ."

The opinion posed the question of how the Government could arrive at a conclusion as to the subversiveness of an individual or organization without an inquiry.

Edgerton agreed with this but pointed out that "inquiry" does not necessarily mean congressional inquiry. He asserted such investigations are the province of the Department of Justice, "whose duty it is . . . to enforce the law of 1940 which makes it a crime to advocate overthrow of the Government by force and violence."

In another paragraph Edgerton wrote: "The term un-American is completely indefinite . . . it may suggest what is not customary or popular here. But different persons have very different ideas of what is not customary or popular . . ."

Writer Didn't Refuse Answer, Judge Says

Los Angeles, March 18 (AP).—In the opinion of United States District Judge Leon R. Yankwich, suspended film writer Lester Cole did not refuse to answer questions before the Thomas Un-American Activities Committee.

Cole and nine other Hollywood figures face trial in Washington on charges of contempt of the committee.

The writer came into Federal Court here on a demand for immediate reinstatement to his $1500 per week job at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio. Pending in Superior Court is a suit in which he demands $3,283,425 from the studio, alleging a broken contract.

In connection with Cole's testimony before the Thomas Committee, Judge Yankwich asked an M-G-M atorney if he could cite any law which states that an administrative body or a judge can tell a witness he must answer yes or no to a question. The lawyer replied that he knew of no such law.

"Then your man did not refuse to answer," the jurist asserted. "He merely said he wanted to answed in his own way. As I view the law, he did not refuse to answer."

Judge Yankwich said he expected to make a decision in the case next week.

French Woman Scientist Detained

General Tom C. Clark as "subversive."

The committee official at the airport to meet her was Dr. Edward Barsky, chairman. Dr. Barsky himself was indicted for refusal to yield records of the organization to the House Un-American Activities Committee. His conviction of contempt of Congress was upheld today by the United States Court of Appeals in Washington.

During the trial there were accusations that the committee was "honeycombed" with Communists. Dr. Barsky, a New York surgeon, has declared it is nothing more than "a humanitarian organization."

On February 28, Mme. Jolio Curie's husband, who is chief of France's commission for study of atomic energy, presided at a meeting celebrating the thirtieth anniversary of Russia's Red Army. The meeting was called by the "French Friends of the U. S. S. R." Jolio Curie was flanked on the platform by top Communist officials of France and Russian diplomats.

Last June 12 the Joliot-Curies were named for corresponding memberships in the Academy of Sciences of the Soviet Union. No candidates from the United States or Britain were included.

In the past, the Joliot-Curies have listed themselves as Socialists, but Joliot-Curie once said they rarely attended political meetings. In 1937 his wife pronounced herself disillusioned with politics, after having served as France's first woman cabinet member.

She was undersecretary of national education in the cabinet of Leon Blum.

She and her husband were awarded a Nobel Prize in 1935 for their discoveries in radioactivity.

Mme. Joliot-Curie is the daughter of Marie and Pierre Curie, discoverers of radium.

The noted French woman, the last of the plane's passengers to pass through the immigration office remained for 10 minutes in customs while her baggage was examined and then returned to the immigration room. The door closed and two persons said to be her friends waited outside on a bench. Neither they nor newspapermen had an opportunity to speak with her, however.

Reporters who saw her said she appeared "ruffled" and "showed concern."

The friends who had been waiting for her left without identifying themselves.

A publicity man for the refugee organization gave reporters a press release saying the scientist had been invited to the United States as a guest of the committee.

It referred to her as "an outstanding scientist in the field of nuclear physics."

The release stated that during the war she fought with the underground for the liberation of France.

Dr. Barsky told reporters that "I haven't the faintest idea why they are holding her. I didn't expect anything like this to happen."

Asked if he supposed it was because officials thought she was a Communist, Barsky said, "Everyone in France knows she isn't."

Freed in Bond

By The Associated Press

Harold Christoffel, former Milwaukee CIO union official convicted of perjury in stating that he was not a Communist, was released from jail yesterday in $5000 bond.

A United States Court of Appeals clerk said Christoffel posted the money originally put up by the CIO United Auto Workers when he was indicted last summer.

Christoffel was convicted in Federal District Court on March 3 of falsely swearing to a congressional committee that he was not a Communist. He was sentenced to spend two to six years in prison. He has appealed his conviction.

Hollywood Writer Among 8 Arrested

All Are Charged With Belonging to Subversive Group

Los Angeles, March 18 (AP).—Jaroslaw Dmytryk, Hollywood writer and brother of director Edward Dmytryk, was arrested today by the Immigration Service.

It is said he and seven others would be held for deportation hearings. All are accused, said W. A. Carmichael, regional director of the service, of being aliens and members of an organization advocating the overthrow of the U. S. Government by force and violence.

Carmichael said the eight are members of various organizations, none of which was named. He identified Jaroslaw Dymtryk as a native of Austria.

His brother, Edward, is one of 10 Hollywood film figures facing charges in Washington of contempt of the Thomas Un-American Activities Committee, which alleges that they refused to answer yes or not to questions in hearings there as to whether they are Communists.

The Immigration Service said a consolidated hearing, to determine whether the organizations are Communistic in nature, already has been held and that another may be scheduled later.

Others Are Listed

The others were identified by Carmichael as:

Esther Sazar, native of Russia, former secretary of a union here.

Joseph Boross, native of Hungary.

Josef Luber, native of Jugo-Slavia.

Arron Grossberg, native of Poland, a waiter.

Joseph Modotti, native of Italy.

Leo Josephson To Begin 1-Year Term

New York, March 18 (AP).—Leon Josephson, former Trenton, N. J., attorney and admitted Communist, submitted today to begin a one-year Federal prison term for refusal to be sworn and testify before a subcommittee of the House Unamerican Activities Committee.

As he entered the United States marshal's office, Josephson waved to newsmen and said:

"Goodby, boys. I hope it will be a better world when I come out."

Convicted last October, Josephson carried his case to the United States Supreme Court, which last month refused to ocnsider his appeal attacking constitutionality of the committee's authority.

Minor Points

Reds Offer Concessions On Austria

London, March 18 (NYHT.).—The four-power talks on Austria's treaty of independence were saved, at least momentarily, from collapse today when Soviet Russia offered two minor concessions.

The Soviet concessions, submitted to the conference of the Big Four Foreign Ministers' deputies, are almost certain to be rejected within the next few days. Unless further Russian concessions are forthcoming, the conference is expected to break down sometime next week.

The Russian proposals cut Russia's demand for a cash settlement from 200 million dollars to 175 million dollars and reduces its oil production demands from 66 2/3 per cent to 64 per cent.

France to Oust 11 Russians of Secret Order

Paris, March 18 (U.P.).—The Ministry of Interior announced tonight that France would deport immediately 11 Russians arrested last night for secretly reorganizing the outlawed "Union of Soviet Citizens."

The Russians were picked up in a raid on a Paris apartment after the government acquired proof that the union, dissolved by decree on December 15, 1947, had "reorganized in clandestine form."

Police seized documents last night at the apartment of Dimitri Odinetz, 64, which, coupled with lengthy questioning, proved the union had reorganized.

Odinetz formerly headed the group.

(The National Assembly tonight approved a bill aimed at a possible Communist coup or nation-wide strike wave.

(The bill authorizes the government to appoint eight inspector generals with extraordinary powers to aid the Minister of Interior in maintaining order during periods of internal disturbances. It was passed, 414 to 183, over violent Communist objections.)

Condon Demands Hearing Before Probe Committee

Philadelphia, March 18 (AP).—Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards, demanded last night that he be permitted to appear before the House Committee on Un-American Activities, which described him as "the weakest link in our atomic security."

Dr. Condon, who was in Philadelphia to deliver a lecture at the Franklin Institute, told a reporter:

"My difficulty is that they will not ask me anything. I am perfectly willing to be investigated until they are blue in the face. I have nothing to hide."

Dr. Condon, who has denied he knowingly associated with "alleged Soviet espionage agents," said he notified the House committee last July he was available for questioning but that he had not yet received a committee reply.

Daily Worker's News Editor Quits To Join Catholics

London, March 18 (AP).—Douglas A. Hyde said today he has resigned as news editor of the Communist Daily Worker and is joining the Catholic Church.

His action recalled that of Louis F. Budenz, who resigned as managing editor of the Daily Worker in New York in 1945, and returned to the Catholic Church.

Hyde, a Communist for 20 of his 38 years, has been news editor of the Daily Worker five years.

"It became obvious to me that the movement for which I had fought and worked so long was destroying those very freedoms and decencies for which it claimed to be fighting," Hyde said.

"It became obvious equally that communism was incapable of providing a cure for an extremely sick world.

"I am appalled at what has happened during recent weeks in Czechoslovakia."

Convicted Woman Spy To Be Deported

The Justice Department yesterday announced that Grace Buchanan Dineen, in prison since 1944 as a wartime espionage agent, will be deported to her native Canada tomorrow.

She was born in Toronto in 1909.

German Reds Meet to Plan Government

Berlin, March 18 (AP).—A Communist-controlled peoples congress met here today with the avowed purpose of setting up a German republic.

Hermann Matern, Berlin leader of the Soviet-sponsored Socialist Unity Party, said the "republic" should be ready to take over power from the present four-power government of all Germany.

Anti-Communist forces held a rival demonstration a mile away before the burned-out Reichstag on the hundredth anniversary of the 1848 revolution which failed to bring democracy to Germany.

Jakob Kaiser, Christian Democrat, told the rival throng "the erection of a totalitarian system in the Soviet zone is in full swing" and the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia was "the last signal for all those who still believed themselves able to halt, through understanding, the brutal striving for power."

The peoples congress met to set up a peoples council which would design a constitution for the "republic" and act as its executive body. About 2500 delegates, some from the western zones, but most from the Russian zone, attended.

Campaign Speech

Cominform Accused by De Gasperi

Rome, March 18.—Premier Alcide De Gasperi told an audience of 70,000 at Bologna tonight that Russia and four other Cominform countries had founded "a special secret committee" to "synchronize the conduct of Communists in Italy and France."

Cominform is the short name for the Communist International Information Bureau. The Communist parties of nine European nations are members.

He said these delegates attended the Cominform committee's secret meeting in Poland last September.

Col. Gen. Andrei A. Zhdanov, secretary-general of the Russian Comunist Party; Milovan Djilas of the Yugoslav Communist Party; Jacques Duclos, French Communist leader, and Ana Pauker, Romanian foreign minister.

De Gasperi, opening his election campaign in Communist strongpoints of northern Italy, said the Communists were deliberately sabotaging government attempts to reach trade agreements with Russia, Yugoslavia and other eastern European countries.

Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, secretary of the Vatican Sacred Oriental Congregation, told Catholics of his suburban Rome diocese that support of Communism would bring on them the sternest penalties of the church including refusal of Christian burial after death.

Russia and Bulgaria Sign 20-Year Mutual Defense Pact

London, March 18 (U.P.).—Russia concluded with Bulgaria today a 20-year treaty of friendship, cooperation and mutual military defense, the Moscow radio announced tonight.

As in the case of pacts negotiated with Romania and Hungary, the treaty provides for mutual action in event of aggression "on the part of Germany or any other state which would be united with Germany directly or in any other form."

Foreign Minister Vlacheslav Molotov and Bulgarian Premier Georgi Dimitrov signed while Premier Josef Stalin looked on, Moscow said.

Molotov said the treaty was aimed at preventing German aggression.

Dimitrov said the treaty was "in the spirit of the U. N.," Moscow added.

Finland's Stand On Pact Outlined

Helsinki, Finland, March 18 (AP). President Juho Paasikivi completed today his instructions to Finnish negotiators on a Russian treaty.

Responsible sources said these included "reservations" for dealings in Moscow on Prime Minister Stalin's request for a friendship and military accord.

On the military phase, the informants said Paasikivi's strict instructions give the delegation little leeway without constant consultation with Helsinki.

Informed sources said the instructions probably followed these lines:

Finland cannot provide any military bases.

2. Finland can send no troops abroad.

3. In event of attack Finland would defend her own borders.

4. In event of war, Finland should determine whether outside help should be brought into the country.

Parliament must ratify any treaty. The majority feeling was reported to have hardened against entangling military alliances.

Latin America Oil Hunt Asked

The United States has asked Latin American countries to explore for more oil in view of the world shortage.

The request is made in a State Department memorandum distributed to the 20 Latin American nations through the Inter-American Economic and Social Council.

Pointing to increased world demand for petroleum, the memorandum said:

"... it would be convenient that every country that wants to take measures against a shortage of this product, explore to determine the possibility of finding new oil sources in their own territory."

The document also said that there are limited production facilities in the Middle East; that "these cannot be used because of a lack of transportation and refining means."

6 Czech Politicians Stripped of Immunity

Prague, March 18 (AP).—Czechoslovak government sources said today a successor to the late Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk will be named shortly.

A government spokesman said: "The matter has been arranged."

Speculation was that Zdenek Fierlinger, Social Democrat leader who persuaded his party to cooperate with the Communists, would receive the appointment.

[The United Press said Fierlinger was returned to the chairmanship of the Social Democratic party tonight, correcting a "political mistake" which removed him from that post three months ago when the party congress at Brno spurned his pro-Communist program.]

A procession of top-flight government leaders has been visiting President Eduard Benes at Sezimovo Usti.

Benes has made no statement to the Czechoslovak people since the Communists took control of the government.

As expected, Parliament voted unanimously to strip six former members of their parliamentary immunity, preparing the way for trials for opposing "the will of the people."

Those who lost their immunity are: Vladimir Krajina, former general secretary of the National Socialist Party; Bohuslav Deci, arrested when he tried to flee the country; Alois Cizek and Otto Hora, National Socialists; Jan Ursiny and Fedor Hodza, Slovak Democrats. Newspapers have reported that Krajina and Cizek managed to get out of the country.

U. N. Not Expected to Take Action on Czechoslovakia

Lake Success, N. Y., March 18 (U.P.).—Strong possibility arose tonight that the United Nations debate over Czechoslovakia would notresult in any decision.

Reliable quarters reported that neither the United States, Britain, nor France was prepared to press for a decisive council follow-up of charges Russia threatened peace by supervising the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia.

Revolution Is Brewing

London, March 18 (U.P.).—Richard Crossman, left-wing Labor member of Parliament, who has just returned from Prague, said today he believes a counterrevolution is under way in Czechoslovakia.

He said the country was gripped by "a very quiet, cold terror."

He believed the Communists, by driving the opposition underground, were creating the conspiracy which they claimed to have frustrated in their seizure of power.

"I do not think there is a new setup yet," Crossman said. "But I am fairly confident it is the beginning of a revolution."

Soviet-Backed Troops Poised

the effort to keep Greece in chaos and bring the country into the Soviet sphere.

2. An attack is believed most likely from Albania, and directed toward Ioannina, capital of the Greek province of Epirus. This town of 25,000 is 30 miles from the border. Albania already has opened a propaganda offensive against Greece, alleging nearly 600 Greek "provocations" and stressing that a state of hostilities still prevails from World War II.

3. Other preparations considered ominous include recent repairing of two air strips just inside Greece on the shores of Lake Prespa. Reports also have told of combat planes flying along the frontier and the presence of Russian or Czech military physicians in Tirana, Albania's capital.

4. A two-fold purpose is foreseen for any attack across the border. The short-range aim presumably would be to throw off balance the Greek army's well-advertised forthcoming spring offensive to disperse an estimated 25,000 guerillas within Greece. As the second stage, officials figure the capture of Ioannina would be followed by proclaiming that town as the guerilla capital and then extending diplomatic recognition to "General" Marcos Vafiades' rebel regime by Albania and possibly other Soviet satellites.

Officials said evidence indicated Russian over-all military direction of the stepped-up anti-Greek campaign. They doubted, however that the international brigades had Russian tactical officers.

Pending more critical developments, the guerillas have been using terrorist methods to hamper Greek and American efforts to restore Greek refugees to their villages in time to plant crops. The support of nearly 500,000 refugees has put a heavy burden on American aid.

Greece Mobilizes Resources

Athens, March 18 (AP).—Greece took a stride today toward complete civilian mobilization today as plans matured for a spring offensive against leftist guerillas.

Premier Themistokles Sophoulis proclaimed a "national rally" and empowered government ministers to "take all measures imposed toward serving the imperative needs of the country."

The first decree ordered doctors and druggists to give free medical service to families of conscripts.

Officials said the order would ment employes in some places yesterday.

An official of the American aid mission said the proclamation had not been discussed with American officials.

Government officials will meet within 10 days to formulate precise details of the order.

The order may be used to prevent a strike of civil servants such as the 24-hour strike by government employes permit requisition of factories or any other private enterprise, organization or service needed. They declared it the most drastic mobilization of national resources since war with Italy in 1939.

3 States Join Pakistan

Karachi, Pakistan, March 18 (AP). The government announced tonight the states of Kharan, Lasbella and Makran have joined Pakistan. They are on the border between Pakistan and Iran.

Sun-Bronzed Marines Back From Caribbean

GUILT-EDGED DIVIDENDS

In Europe's whited sepulcher
The bones of murdered Jews bestir themselves and wake
To memories of their forebears
The poets' psalms, the lofty prayers their high priests spoke,
Shepherds guarding their flocks by night,
Warriors girding themselves for fight, the light that shone
From wisdom of their ancient seers
Thru dark despair and bitter tears by Babylon
High heritage of centuries,
A myriad of memories have held their place
And, long remembered and rehearsed,
Still keep the exiled and dispersed over the face
Of earth united in the name
Imperishable hope and aim somebody to hold
The streets once trod, the fields once plowed,
With heads unbloodied and unbowed, by sires of old,
Who consecrated Canaan's soil
With sacrificial prayers and toil of brain and hand.
Today the displaced, dispossessed,
Unhappy, homeless and oppressed of Israel's band,
Fleeing unarmed across the waves,
Are caught and held like captive slaves on Cyprus shore.
Their kindred who awaited them
Within the land of Bethlehem in old Judea
Have in their Palestinian home
Builded great schools, made deserts bloom and cities rise.
Why mighty Gentile nations should Let Moslem warriors shed their blood needs no surmise,
For Arab oil is holy oil,
Anointing consciences that foil their own protest
By holding honor in escrow
While guilt-edged dividends still flow from East to West.

Customs Union Body Formed

Brussels, Belgium, March 18 (AP).—The 16 Marshall Plan powers agreed today to set up a permanent economic commission for a European customs union before they adjourn.

This was one of a series of developments speeding the organizing of Europe the day after conclusion of the five-power western European alliance which President Truman said he was sure the United States would support.

1. [The United Press quoted highly informed diplomatic sources as declaring that American occupation forces in Germany will be strengthened in the near future as part of President Truman's determination to support western European freedom.

[The same informants said the United States has been quietly buying back former war surplus material from the French government, and has repurchased the oil pipeline from Le Havre to Toul, near the German frontier.

[The informants said the United States may sign within three months a limited military agreement with the five nations which signed the western European economic - military cooperation treaty in Brussels yesterday. By the end of three months, it is highly likely that other countries will have joined in the pact.]

2. Deputies from Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg—the members of the new alliance—will begin work next week on fulfilling the military and other sweeping provisions of the pact, it was announced.

A spokesman for the Brussels powers said they were "highly pleased" by President Truman's expression of confidence of American support for the defensive pact.

3. It was disclosed that Field Marshal Lord Montgomery, chief of the British imperial general staff, will visit Brussels in two weeks and may discuss European union defense.

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin conferred at lunch with Belgian Premier Paul Henri Spaak.

The union deputies next week will begin organization of the consultative council created by the pact and other machinery for economic and military collaboration.

The Council is to be in continuing session to deal with any aggression or threat against any of the five powers and to coordinate economic and cultural policies.

4. In Paris, the 16 nations in the Marshall Plan agreed on the general principles underlying their projected permanent organization. Foreign Ministers' deputies completed their instructions to a working committee which will draft the charter and a treaty for economic cooperation.

The 16-nation study group here which is examining the possibilities of a European customs union met with observers from western Germany and the British Commonwealth countries sitting in for the first time, and will be in session for a week.

This was a big week in the unifying of Europe.

Sweden and Norway joined the customs union study because it may facilitate a contemplated customs union of the Scandinavian countries. On Tuesday the Marshall Plan countries at Paris agreed to create a permanent European organization for mutual economic defense.

Yesterday, Britain, France and the Benelux countries (Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg) united in a big economic pool by signing the Brussels pact. Italy and France are to wind up the week Saturday by signing an accord to negotiate a customs union. The French and Italian Premiers probably will meet at Turin on the following Monday.

Canada May Join Treaty of Brussels

Ottawa, March 18 (AP).—A source who often speaks the official views of the government said today Canada might be willing to join in the Brussels five-power security pact if other countries do.

The spokesman indicated Canadians viewed the terms of the Brussels treaty as better than those of the Pan American Union.

HOW TO CARVE A WHOLE HAM

1. Put shank end of ham at carver's right. If a right ham, the bulged side will be toward carver; if left, away from him.

4. Cut thin slices down to leg bone, at right angles to bone. Cut as many slices as desired.

2. Cut two or three slices parallel to the length of ham, from thin side, this will form a base on which to stand ham.

5. With fork in place, release slices from leg bone by running knife along bone under slices.

3. Turn ham up, so it rests on cut surface, keeping shank end at right. Hold ham firmly, cut small wedge-shaped piece from shank end.

6. If more servings are needed, turn ham back to original flat position and carve slices at right angles to bone.

Two Years Service Asked for Draft

mediate draft calls if Selective Service is restored, and Royall's insistence that nothing less than two years service for draftees is practicable gave Congress a bit of jolt yesterday.

Sentiment on Capitol Hill on President Truman's demand for both the draft and universal military training still is unformed. Both the GOP leadership and many members are waiting for the reaction from back home before committing themselves to a course of action.

Necessity Recognized

But many leaders concede privately that at least one of the bills must be passed. At first the proposal for a "temporary draft" seemed more palatable in an election year. It was aimed at an emergency, while UMT involved a long-range program.

Universal training, however, would call up youths for six months—rather than 24. No one would have to serve until the summer of 1949—instead of immediately—and then in smaller numbers.

Congressional leaders probably will take no definite stand on the two measures until after Easter. Speaker Joe Martin said that a leadership decision in the House will come after the foreign relief legislation is disposed of next month.

Defense chiefs are convinced both bills are needed, but if they can get only one, they'd prefer UMT over the stopgap draft.

Members of the Senate Armed Services Committee quizzed Forrestal, Royall, Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan and Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington for two hours yesterday without getting much of the information they wanted.

Ditarted Plans Not Ready

President Truman's message caught military planning officials almost as much by surprise and it did congressional leaders. So not only was there no draft bill ready, but no detailed plans had been made on expansion of the services. Even the basic decisions on which they are to be based were not reached until last weekend at the Key West conference.

Here, however, ar what facts the legislators were able to glean about the proposed UMT and draft:

1. The two programs would draw upon "two separate manpower sources." Subject to draft would be young men now 18 to 25—a pool of some three millions. Probably no one would be drafted until he is 19 years old. UMT, which would not call up anyone until 1949, would take youngsters then 18.

Would Exempt Veterans

2. Forrestal said that it was planned to exclude veterans from either program. Royall added that there had been some discussion of drafting men who had had only a month or two of service and were let out on special discharges.

3. Some answers on proposed deferments, total men wanted, etc. may be ready today or tomorrow.

4. The Army does not want to call up the 225,000 men in the National Guard and the million—plus in the Reserves in lieu of the draft. Royall said that the Guard in its present State of training "is not an acceptable substitute" for Regular Army units filled to strength. He added that the terms of most enlisted reservists are expiring and they would be of little help, while no trouble is found in getting all the Reserve officer volunteers that are needed.

To Maintain Standards

5. The Army does not plan to lower its present high enlistment standards in accepting draftees. During the war, men with General Classification Test scores as low as 59 were accepted, it was said, while today 80 is the minimum.

Royall declared that anything less than a two-year draft period helps the Army but little. Eighteen-month voluntary enlistments have been stopped for this reason, he said. The length of time required to train a man, ship him overseas, bring him back home and give him his leave, results in only a few months of actual service.

"I've been informed that it costs $1000 a month to maintain a soldier in Japan under one of those short enlistments" said Chairman Gurney (R., S. Dak.).

Royall agreed that this was correct.

Gurney Voices Agreement

After the hearing, Gurney declared he could not speak for the committee on the Army two-year proposal, but added: "In my opinion, the country cannot afford such costly short term enlistments."

Forrestal told the committee that we must "show conclusively and by decisive legislation . . . that the United States intends to be strong and to hold that strength ready to keep the world both at peace and free."

But an immediate boost in strength and the longrange program involved in UMT are necessary, Forrestal said. He attacked the theory that air power alone can give America security, and termed "fantastic" the contention that A-bombs, guided missiles and germ warfare make the training of large numbers of men unnecessary.

"The great size of modern military forces has been misconceived as signifying 'mass,'" said Forrestal. "A large Army of specialists is not a 'mass' Army. The simple truth is that more and more men must be trained to meet the threat of war in which weapons of mass destruction may be employed."

Objections of UMT

UMT, said the Defense chief, will do four things:

1. Provide the National Guard and Reserves with the required number of men they can't get by voluntary means.

2. Give those civilian forces men already partially trained, so that the units can become "an effective force."

3. Create of a training establishment adequate to meet the needs of a full mobilization without costly delay.

4. Provide a foundation of trained manpower for civilian defense in an emergency.

50 Reserve Carriers Reported in Readiness

Long Beach, Calif., March 18 (AP). Rear Admiral Richard F. Whitehead says the Naval Air Reserve has more than 50 carriers in readiness in the event of a national emergency.

The admiral, head of the Naval Air Reserve program, explained the program embraced 233 squadrons which could be placed in service on 50 to 55 carriers now "in mothballs." He said personnel to man the carriers could be drawn from the reserve's present strength of 40,000, including 6000 pilots.

Business Booming At Recruiting Stations

Greater Washington recruiting stations reported substantial increases in business yesterday. None experienced waiting lines, but all branches said they had more applicants, mostly for reserve status.

Army recruiters said there had been about 50 per cent more applicants than last week for the Enlisted Reserve Corps, with no noticeable change in Regular Army enlistments. The Coast Guard had seven applicants yesterday against a previous daily average of one or two. Naval Reserve attracted more than twice as many as last week. The Marine Corps recorded a 100 per cent increase in inquiries.

Trade Committee . . . Approves UMT

The executive committee of the Washington Board of Trade has gone on record in support of universal military training.

President John A. Reilly announced yesterday that the group took the action at a meeting this week in presenting a four-point plan "designed to implement the Nation's reserve armed forces."

In other parts of the resolution, prepared on recommendations of a military and naval affairs subcommittee, the committee: (1) urged passage of pending legislation to grant pay to reservists on inactive duty, (2) promised that the board of trade would urge employers to grant special leave of absence to employes who need it to maintain reserve status, and (3) decided to encourage firms to sponsor service units in connection with the Army Affiliation Program.

Bill Includes Ship Charter

counter hostility from maritime unions was the watering-down of a Senate provision that 50 per cent of ERP cargoes from the United States be carried in American ships where available. The House committee specified only that "a substantial part" of ERP supplies be shipped in American vessels.

Will Be Own "Watchdogs"

The House committee spent seven hours in exhausting and temper-trying meetings yesterday in its attempt to finish writing a foreign aid bill by Saturday. Among the changes it made yesterday were these:

(1) It rejected a Senate approved plan to set up a joint "watchdog committee" of both Houses to keep check on the handling of foreign aid programs. "We'll do our own watch-dogging," said Chairman Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.), always jealous of his Foreign Affairs Committee prerogatives. Eaton's committee decided, however, that the new special ambassador to the Marshall Plan countries must keep the chairmen of the Senate and House Foreign Policy Committees informed of all ERP developments.

(2) It voted to require complete FBI clearance before any new employes can start work for the new Government agency, the "Economic Cooperation Administration," which will handle foreign aid programs. Since an FBI loyalty check takes about six weeks, this means that the new agency will have to be staffed in its early weeks by previously checked Government employes on detail from other agencies.

(3) It broadened the Senate's inducements to private investors to put money into European recovery projects. The Senate bill provided that the Administrator could guarantee up to 265 million dollars of private funds, so that American investors could be sure of converting any of their European earnings into dollars. The House bill increased the limit to 500 million dollars, and provided for payment of a 1% premium instead of requiring investors to deposit their guaranteed funds in the Treasury.

With its long sessions yesterday the House committee virtually completed action on the European portion of its combined foreign-aid bill. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee hopes today to complete a separate bill on military aid to Greece and Turkey.

Argentines Approve Peron Rule, Bruce Says

Buenos Aires, March 18 (AP).—United States Ambassador James C. Bruce said today the results of Argentina's March 7 congressional elections show a majority of voters are satisfied with the administration of President Juan D. Peron.

9 Americans Parachute Onto Berlin

Berlin, March 18 (AP).—Nine Americans, including three women and Brig. Gen. Telford Taylor, parachuted from a crippled C-47 plane over Berlin today and landed on rooftops, railroad tracks and city streets.

Taylor

Taylor and his wife, of Chevy Chase, Md., and three other occupants of the plane were in a hospital tonight with injuries. He is the chief United States counsel for the Nuernberg war crimes trials.

One of the injured, a member of the plane's crew, was in a critical condition. All nine who jumped suffered shock and bruises. They landed in the French and Russian occupation sectors of Berlin.

Two of the aircraft's 11 occupants, he pilot and copilot remained with the plane and they made a safe emergency landing at the RAF Airfield in the British sector.

Mrs. Taylor said she was "half pushed and half jumped" as one of the plane's two engines failed. She landed on a roof in the French sector and skidded to the ground. She was hospitalized with cuts and bruises.

Taylor suffered a back injury. Doctors said he would be laid up for about four weeks. He landed in the middle of a street in Pankow, Russian-occupied territory in the northeast section of Berlin. He was brought to a U. S. Army hospital by a German doctor.

Telling of her experience, Mrs. Taylor said:

It seemed that none of us wanted to jump. One woman wanted to stay with the plane but her husband ordered her to go. She went.

"Most of us had to be pushed a little," she added with a grin.

"Just after I jumped, I pulled the ripcord. No one ever told me that it comes loose from the chute. I found it in my hand and I thought this was the finish for me. But then, I began to go down gently—and it was kind of nice."

Central American War Is Predicted

Costa Rica Asks Arms From Honduras, Accuses Guatemala of Supplying Rebels

San Jose, Costa Rica, March 18 (AP).—The government today appealed to Honduras for arms and economic help to put down the Costa Rican revolution.

Secretary of War Rene Picado, asked if this "is going to be a Central American war, replied.

"Yes."

Foreign Secretary Alvaro Bonilla Lara said Costa Rica had made a vigorous protest to Guatemala over "absolute evidence that rifles and ammunition are being obtained by the opposition from Guatemala."

At least three Dominican Republic pilots arrived from Ciudad Trujillo to fly two planes commandeered from a Pan American Airways subsidiary yesterday by government troops.

President Teodoro Picado yesterday authorized security police to take over the Red Cross. Another decree set up a concentration camp.

Fighting is taking place near Cartago west of here, and skirmishes at San Ramon.

Although Picardo's government has claimed a series of victories, opposition reports last night said 2000 square miles of Costa Rican territory were held by insurgents. Jose Figueres, opposition military leader, was described as preparing a move into Cartiago, only 12 miles from San Jose.

Fighting started earlier this month after the "lame-duck" Congress annulled the election of opposition presidential candidate Otilio Uhte Blanco, on the grounds of fraud. Former President Rafael Calderon Guardia was the Picado government's candidate in the stormy February 8 election.

The Communist hammer and sickle flag has been flying at some places in this country which extends within 175 miles of the Panama Cana Zone.

A United States Army officer said Maniel Mora, chief of the Vanguardh Ppopular (Communist) Party was carrying a submachine gun and issuing orders at the government's police and army barracks here. Mora later was reported visting Picado's office.

Scandinavians To Resist Foe

to the hazard of the entire Scandinavian Peninsula."

The three Premiers, Hans Hedtoft of Denmark, Einar Gerhardsen of Norway and Tage Erlander of Sweden, strongly denounced communism and dictatorship in their statements.

Offically, the three were having one of their periodic get-togethers as leaders of their Social Democratic Parties and not as heads of their countries.

The three Premiers in their speeches deplored "fear of a new war" and all pledged cooperation in the Marshall Plan.

Describing the international situation as so tense that many doubt a peaceful solution can be found, Premier Hedtoft of Denmark said "Communists are doing their utmost to increase social unrest and block peaceful development."

(In Copenhagen, Danish Finance Minister H. C. Hansen called for rearmament of Denmark to safeguard the country against a possible coup. He spoke at a Social Democrat rally).

Premier Gerhardsen of Norway said the international situation was "undeniably serious" and Communists were "a grave danger to freedom and peace."

"Every single worker in Scandinavia ought to know with scorching certainty that the workers also will lose their freedom under Communist dictatorship," he said.

Trans-Jordan Arabs Move Into Palestine

Hebron, Palestine, March 18 (AP). Troops of Trans-Jordan's Arab Legion moved into Palestine today and took over security control in the two Arab districts.

They are the first soldiers belonging to a regular army of a neighboring Arab state to enter the Holy Land in their own uniform "under authority of the Arab League."

The day's fighting in Palestine brought the unofficial death toll since November 29 to 1830. Arab gunners killed five British soldiers and three Jewish electricians near Haifa. Eight Jews were reported slain by Arabs attacking the Hartuv settlement. Haganah, the Jewish militia, launched counter-attack at dusk.

Arab Accuses Russia Of Palestine Designs

Lake Success, March 18 (AP).—The chief Arab spokesman at United Nations headquarters charged today that Russia wants to create a Communist nation in Palestine.

Faris el Khoury, Syria's delegate on the Security Council, said Russia covets and has designs on Middle East oil resources now under American control.

U. N. delegates speculated the Arabs now would shift the emphasis of their attack on the Palestine partition plan to a fight against Communism.

Meanwhile a Soviet source declared the Security Council must take concrete steps to prevent a threat to peace in Palestine.

This source said a reported agreement among the big powers on a compromise report of their findings on the Palestine situation was vague and was only a "half-step" forward.

Observers here felt Russia may try to stop Palestinee bloodshed tomorrow.

Citizens Group Split on Bus Route Question

Representatives of two Northeast area citizens associations split yesterday over proposed rerouting of Capital Transit Co.'s E-2 Rhode Island ave busline in the Brookland area.

CTC officials opposed the plan, along with two others affecting H-2 and B-2 lines, at a hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

Representatives of the Burroughs Citizens Association asked PUC to have the E-2 line make a loop via 22d st., Rhode Island ave. and 20th st. to Monroe ave., instead of turning onto Monroe at 22d st.

But W. D. Eisenhart, president of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, said residents didn't want buses running on the narrow streets used by children going to school or church.

Aubrey Hummer of 3208 20th st. ne., presented a petition from 189 persons opposing the plan.

F. G. Awalt, CTC attorney, said the additional service would not justify the cost.

The company also opposed requested changes which would route the H-2 crosstown line from Franklin st. to 14th st. via 20th and Irving instead of the intersection of Franklin and 14th, and extend the B-2 line via South Dakota ave. from present terminal at the avenue and Bladensburg rd. to Sargent rd.

Fight to Finish Promised by Tuck

Virginia Executive Renews Blast At Truman's Civil Rights Plans

Richmond, Va., March 18 (AP).—Governor Tuck tonight promised a fight to the finish against President Truman's Federal civil rights program.

"I shall follow a positive course now, as battle is joined," he said in an address from the executive offices over a State radio hookup, "and this course will be pressed despite the blasts of New Deal Flugelmen and political thimble-riggers whose principal interest in government is to leech from it the profits of political office."

The Governor's half-hour address was hie first-hand report on the major actions of the recent General Assembly. In it he defended the soundness of his appropriations, tax and reorganization programs, but held his heaviest fire for the section dealing with the new election law—the anti-Truman bill.

Tuck said the election bill, by which Virginia's Democratic convention can withhold the State's 11 electoral votes from the National party nominee if they disapprove of his policies, gave a Virginia voter wider choice than he had ever enjoyed before.

It was offered to the General Assembly as Virginia's answer to the civil rights program and in its original draft would have barred the names of all candidates from the ticket and would have closed the door to the appearance of the Henry Wallace third party. However, in its toned-down version that finally was approved it let the Wallace party on by petition and made the appearance of the National Democratic nominee's name a simple procedure. The National Convention would merely have to certify its candidates if the Virginia delegation were instructed otherwise.

Tuck freely conceded that the bill was aimed directly at the President because of the civil rights program.

"That program would completely ignore the division of jurisdiction conceived by the founding fathers in the formulation of the Federal Constitution," he said. "It would coerce and intimidate the States into submission by all manner of threats and assaults. It would ignore the conditions peculiar to the South and to its peoples, and it would crush in the dust underfoot the rights of the individual."

On his purely domestic legislative program the Governor took oblique cognizance of local editorial criticism on the half-billion dollar State budget and his 14 million dollar a year tax increase program.

The Governor said it was a misnomer to refer to the State budget as a 511 million budget, and added:

"In reality, a large portion of this total is merely a revolving fund, or funds derived from business operations, involving no tax money whatever. An example is the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, with total estimated expenditures for the biennium of $139,216, which is simply a merchandise fund. In fact more than 40 per cent of the total budget or approximately 241 million dollars is derived from sources other than State taxation."

His budget was drawn and a tax program mapped, the Governor went on, in a time of rising costs and spiralling prices.

He said he worked with the Budget Advisory Commission and pared the financial program to what was considered proper proportion. But still, he said, it became apparent that revenues then in sight would not be sufficient to meet real needs of essential State services.

In the face of this situation he decided on his tax program, the Governor explained. Its principal items were increases in the corporation and individual income taxes lifting the maximum from 3 to 5 per cent and providing for graduated steps in the lower brackets in the individual's tax.

The entire thing, he said, would lift the per capital tax rate in Virginia $4.49 above the 1946 base and, on another basis of comparison, would still leave Virginia's tax rate twentieth from the bottom of the 48 States.

He noted that a married man with one dependent, earning $10,000 a year, would find his State income tax increased $69 under the new rates; a man earning $5000 in the same marital status would pay $11.9 more and a similarly established man earning $2500 would pay 25 cents more.

The money, the Governor pointed out, would go to increased appropriations for schools (largely teacher pay), mental institutions, health and welfare.

Petrillo and Networks Agree on 3-Year Terms

New York, March 18 (AP).—The American Federation of Musicians and the radio networks today agreed on a new three-year contract that includes a provision permitting live music for television.

The agreement came after many weeks of negotiations between the networks and James C. Petrillo, president of the AFL-Musicians Union.

It insures that there will be no interruption of radio network musical programs on March 31, when a 60-day extension of the old contract expires. The agreement also means that television will be able to carry live musical programs, including symphony orchestras, operas, musical comedies and popular bands.

The new contract provides for the same salary schedule as the old contract and does not call for any increase in the number of musicians employed.

The union has asked for a wage increase and for employment of more musicians.

The ban on live music for television was put into effect in early 1945. Since then television has had to depend on recordings for instrumental music.

Earlier in the nogtiations, last January 29, the union lifted its ban on duplication of musical programs on both standard and frequency modulation radio. The negotiations did not concern the union's ban on the making of recordings and transcriptions in effect since January 21.

Although Petrillo yielded on his demands for higher pay and larger quotas for musicians, he appeared to have gained two important points. First, the new agreement provides that the networks and network-owned stations will maintain their present quotas of musicians. This would prevent any reduction in employment for three years. Second, the union did not commit itself to a salary scale for television, leaving the way open for increases at any time.

Coal Strike Talks Sought

Horn, would act independently. The operators' representative took the position that no progress could be made in setting up a miners' pension plan—the whole basis of the current strike—unless a third trustee was named.

In some quarters it was thought last night that Ching might try to get an agreement on this point in the conference he is reported trying to arrange for today.

If the two principals could concur on the selection of a third man, this might be a way to end the strike. Negotiations on a pension plan could be resumed and Lewis then might see his way clear to passing the word to the coal fields to get the men back into the mines.

Deadline in Congress

On the other hand, if Van Horn goes to District Court alone, he may be within his legal rights in petitioning for the appointment of a trustee, but such an act would not seem to be particularly helpful in ending the walkout.

At best, it would take some time for a Federal judge to pick a qualified person for the job. And if his choice was not acceptable to Lewis, the strike would presumably continue anyway.

Today will mark another deadline, related to action asked by Congress. Senator Ball (R., Minn.) wired Van Horn and Lewis to supply the Joint Congressional Committee on Labor-Management Relations with "all the facts" in the dispute by today.

Van Horn, it is believed, has sent Ball a sheaf of data. But there has been no word whether Lewis did the same. Best bet was that Lewis would ignore the request.

Invades Taftland

Stassen Asks Truman to Stiffen Policy

Cleveland, March 18 (AP).—Harold E. Stassen called tonight for four more men in President Truman's new foreign policy and criticized Senator Taft for what he termed his opposition to adequate preparedness.

On his first invasion of Ohio in an attempt to wrest presidential delegate from Taft in the May 4 primaries, Stassen said he found himself "repeatedly in basic disagreement with him (Taft) as to the policies which our Republican Party should follow."

In a separate speech before his supporters at Public Music Hall, Stassen said President Truman's proposed program was all right as far as it went.

But it also should have included, he went on: (1) outlawing the Communist party (2) stopping all shipments of "war machinery" to the Soviet Union (3) provision for a stronger air force and (4) strengthening the United Nations.

Stassen has entered presidential delegates in all of Ohio's 22 congressional districts and this marked his first day in the State on their behalf.

With respect to his campaign here, he said:

"I have a high regard for Senator Robert Taft. I respect his sincerity and his ability and his forthrightness.

"But I find myself repeatedly in basic disagreement with him as to the policies which our Republican Party should follow . . .

"He states in New England that he has no knowledge of any Russian intention or military aggression.' He add that 'we have to work on the theory that there is going to be peace.'

"Undoubtedly this accounts for his opposition to adequate preparedness. I believe that we must be much more realistic and imaginative in the development of American foreign policy . . .

Eisenhower Leads Field in Straw Vote

Gen. Dwigh D. Eisenhower emerged victor in a "1948 Presidential straw vote" conducted at the Trans-Lux Theater March 11 through 7 in conection with the March of Time film," "The Presidential Year."

General Eisenhower topped a field of 11 Presidential aspirants with 727 votes. The next six highest were President Truman, 687; Dewey, 644; MacArthur, 561; Vandenberg, 485; Wallace, 376, and Stassen, 350.

Bringing up the rear were Taft, with 231; Warren, 104; Martin, 41, and Saltonstall, 8. Highest write-in candidates were Senator Byrd, with 19, and Secretary of State Marshall, 15.

Action by U. S. Foreseen at Atomic Plant

Workers at the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic laboratories agreed last night to call off a threatened strike if their employers, the Carbide and Carbon Chemicals Corporation maintained present working conditions. But a company official rejected the proposal.

It seemed certain, therefore, that the Government would seek an injunction under the Taft-Hartley Act "national emergency" procedures to prevent a walkout, scheduled for midnight tonight.

That the Government would take this action was freely predicted here yesterday. But by 4:30 yesterday afternoon, no injunction had been filed when the Federal Court at Knoxville—nearest court to the scene of the dispute—closed its doors.

ITU Reaches Agreement on Four Major Points

New York, March 18 (AP).—Negotiators for the AFL International Typographical Union and New York City's commercial printing interests announced agreement today on four points which have deadlocked attempts to draw up a contract for the industry.

The joint announcement by the ITU and the Printers' League section of the New York Employing Printers Association said the points of understanding included union shop, struck work, jurisdiction and liability.

The dispute between the union and the Printers' League section stems from the union's "no contract" policy adopted in its fight against the Taft-Hartley law. It was intensified last week when employers posted notices stepping up work week from 36¼ hours to 40 hours a week.

Wages Not Discussed

A spokesman for the city division of labor relations which has been hearing the case said economic issues, chiefly wages, have not been discussed yet.

The "understanding" will be recommended to the membership of the ITU and its New York Local, No. 6, as well as to members of the league.

Woodruff Randolph, ITU president, praised the "cooperative spirit" of the league and said results of the understanding "promise to meet our needs, so far as possible considering the hazards of the Taft-Hartley law."

No union official would say immediately whether the understanding represented a tentative formula providing a basis for settling scores of strikes and strike threats throughout the country resulting from the ITU "no contract" policy.

Only local commercial printers—not newspapers—are affected.

May Employ Journeymen

The understanding provided that composing room work be performed only by apprentices and journeymen. Non-union apprentices may be employed if they have a competency certificate from the school for printers' apprentices which is maintained mutually by employers, the union and the board of education.

It defines journeymen as "employes who have completed approved apprentice training as provided in the contract; journeymen members of the union or applicants for composing room work who upon reference to the school by a member of the league secure certificates of competency."

While this provides for open shop employment, a spokesman pointed out that if a union is established in a shop all employes would be required to join as a condition of continued employment.

Dealing with employers handling struck work, the league said it intended to limit composing room work to jobs obtained on a normal account basis. It also was agreed to review procedures and developments in the industry periodically and on specific request.

Meat Packer Arbitration Offer Rejected

Cihicago, March 18 (AP).—Striking CIO meat handlers proposed today that a presidential fact-finding board arbitrate their wage dispute but the packers declined to second the idea.

Meat prices were going up, meanwhile, both in the wholesale and retail markets.

Wholesale meats soared for the fourth straight day as the Nationwide strike of 100,000 CIO packinghouse workers went into its third day.

Chicago Prices Rise

Chicago meat prices are one to five cents a pound ahead of last week. Steaks, lamb chops, pork loins and hams were reported four to six cents higher in New York. Safeway chain, which operates 223 stores in New York and New Jersey, said meat prices were "up a bit." Some larger Eastern food chains predicted meats would jump two to six cents a pound next week.

Ralph Helstein, union president, made the arbitration proposal at the first hearing of the fact-finding board.

"The union is sufficiently confident of the validity of its position to submit the issue for such a determination," he said in a statement to the board.

The union also proposed arbitration before its members left their jobs at midnight Monday.

The fact-finding board must report to President Truman by April 1. The President then could ask the Attorney General to seek an injunction under the Taft-Hartley Act to halt the strike for 80 days while other settlement efforts are attempted.

Hope to Speed Report

Nathan P. Feinsinger, board chairman, said today he considered it was the over-all function of the board "to avoid a strike or lockout." The board, he added, will attempt to speed up its report to the President.

In the New York wholesale market, steer beef gained another $1 a hundred pounds, veal and lamb were $2 higher and pork moved up $1 to 3. Advances of $1 on all classes were scored at Chicago.

Farmers, however, sharply increased the amount of livestock shipped to market today. The Department of Agriculture said receipts were about normal when compared with a prestrike Thursday. The heavier receipts brought the average for the week to about on half of normal. This is about equal to the productive capacity of meat packing plants operating with AFL or independent union employes.

There were no reports of actual meat shortages in any part of the country. An estimated three weeks' supply of meat was in storage warehouses when the strike started.

Butter at $1 as Margarine Tax Cut Is Beaten

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Dollar-a-pound butter returned to many retail stores throughout the country yesterday, as wholesale prices shot up another five cents on the New York market.

The risein New York totaled 10 cents in two days. Butter has been skyrocketing ever since the House Agriculture Committee Tuesday defeated all efforts to reduce the special taxes and license fees levied on margarine, butter's only competitor.

Chairman Clifford R. Hope (R., Kans.) last night declared the committee has no intention of reconsidering its action throwing out 18 bills to lower margarine taxes.

Instead, Hope said, the recent advance will be probed by Chairman August H. Andresen (R., Minn.) of a special House Committee set up to investigate speculation in commodities. Andresen was a leader against removal of margarine taxes.

The fight flared up again yesterday on the House floor.

Representative W. R. Poage (D., Tex.) started it by declaring that Wednesday's rise of eight cents a pound in butter was due to the committee's action.

"There is a nice profit for the butter handlers," Poage declared. "No profit for the farmer, but a burden for the consumer."

Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.) suggested that the backers of the butter lobby "explain the Agriculture Committee's action to the housewife."

Andresen replied that the Southern members only wanted to sell more cottonseed to make margarine and "put the cow out of business."

Dairy interests yesterday denied that their success in keeping discriminatory taxes on margarine had caused the market boost.

One of the largest dairies, the Land O' Lakes of Minnesota, telegraphed Chairman Clifford Hope (R., Kans.), of the committee, that the increase was due to:

1. Heavy public buying in anticipation of a rise in price of butter when the proposed laws reducing margarine taxes were defeated.
2. A shortage of butter.
3. Increased demand for butter as the result of President Truman's speech urging early passage of the European Recovery Program and increased in the armed forces.

Mr. Truman's speech, however, didn't have that effect on grain prices. Instead grains generally were lower, with corn leading the downturn.

Wheat closed as much as 2 cents a bushel below Wednesday; corn was down as much as 3½ cents a bushel and soybeans down as much as 4 cents.

Onion prices set a new all-time high in Chicago yesterday. During a hectic session quotations reached $6.45 a sack (50 pounds).

Train Service to Be Reduced Sunday in Line With Government Coal Conservation Order

Train service in and out of Washington will be reduced at midnight Sunday, due to the Government's 25 per cent reduction order on coal-burning locomotives, but the cut won't be substantial.

This was indicated yesterday in a check with major railroads. However, officials of some lines had not yet determined on which routes in their system the reduction would go.

The cut was ordered yesterday by the Office of Defense Transportation because of the Nationwide mine work stoppage.

A spokesman for the Baltimore & Ohio, contacted in Baltimore, said "main line" trains would not be touched by the slash order but service between Washington and Baltimore will be reduced.

Washington to New York service will not be affected, he emphasized.

W. M. Taylor, traffic manager for the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad, reached by phone in Richmond, said the company has arranged with Seaboard Airlines and the Atlantic Coastline to use their Diesel locomotives on the run from Richmond to Washington. Consequently, he said, the schedule will remain unchanged except for removal of one trip.

The Old Dominion run, which ordinarily leaves Washington at 5 p. m., has been cancelled, he said.

Meanwhile, the coal situation here was described as "not serious" by Patrick A. Deck, chairman of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association's coal division. He said, however, that it would be a good idea for residents to "conserve" because the supply won't last more than two or three weeks.

Officials Ask 2% Sales Tax

timony for the sales tax will be given later. A plea to avoid new taxes now by cutting the budget was presented for the Federation of Citizens Association. If a sales tax is t obe put on, the federation called for repeal of the income tax.

Brings Out 9-Year-Old Plan

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), who wants the present District personal income tax law repealed, called after the hearing for an official report from the District Building on possible present use of a 9-year-old plan to combine the 2 per cent sales tax with an income tax on high incomes only, starting at some level from $10,000 to $15,000 a year.

The hearing is being conducted by a joint subcommittee headed by Senator Cain and Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.). It will continue at 10 a. m. today on the bill of Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) to take the local 5 per cent business tax off income of out-of-town firms on sales to District firms when the actual shift of ownership takes place outside the District. Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent estimated the bill would cut District revenue $1,250,000 a year.

The financial gloom yesterday grew from reports of the city officials about vast expenses for which there is no revenue.

The 2 per cent sales tax is designed to raise six million dollars in the year starting July 1. City heads fixed six million as the approximate amount the city would go into the red that year if Congress approves their 101-million-dollar budget and leaves tax laws as they are now.

Warns of Worse Deficits

Commissioner John Russell Young and his colleagues warned of worse deficits if various other things happen.

Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler said the lowest Federal pay raise now in sight for Federal employes—$480 a year—would cost the District $8,341,000 if applied to all city employes.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, said the city's backlog of capital improvement needs will take years to handle. He estimated the total need for the general fund improvements at 130 million dollars. He called for a financial policy that would let the city pay operating expenses, and leave a reasonable margin for improvements.

D. C. Already Owes Million

Fowler expanded the catalogue of future money troubles: He cited the rarely mentioned fact that the District has a public debt—nearly a million dollars due the Federal Government for wartime building loans, and recreational land purchases. The District will have to pay 30 per cent of the new Washington Hospital Center's cost and of Federal grants being proposed for other private hospitals, and the total city bill could reach $10,500,000. The District will have to pay $6,912,000 in cash over 25 years for the proposed new Federal Courts Building here. He listed other expenses.

Critical Finances Surprise

Early in yesterday's hearing, Senator Cain said the joint committee thought last year it was putting the District on a sound financial ground for at least two years with passage of a new city revenue bill. The bill added four million dollars to the Federal payment to the District, making it 12 million a year, applied a 5 per cent tax to income of unincorporated businesses, boosted taxes on property, gasoline, and increased water rates. Dent said yesterday the boost in the property tax rate, plus an increase in assessments, had increased the annual load on property by about seven million dollars a year.

"Now we sit here and find we're in apparently worse shape than we were a year ago," said Caln.

Bates has strongly opposed the sales tax; Representative Smith said yesterday it seemed the only answer. Other members were not committed.

Cain's plan for repealing the District personal income tax drew reaction.

Commissioner John Russell Young said it could go after the sales tax is working. He said it's discriminatory as now set up.

Commissioner Guy Mason said "I think the prevailing income tax should remain as it is—it imposes no undue burden."

"That's music to my ears," said Bates. He took a leading role in starting the income tax here.

CIO and ADA testimony favored broadening the income-tax law—a moved blocked by the House last year.

Judging Begun

450 Carriers Nominated On Courtesy

Almost 1700 entries have been received in the carrier boy courtesy contest sponsored by The Washington Post, which ended last midnight.

Judging will begin today and winners will be announced in Sunday's paper. One boy, the top winner, will receive a $50 Government bond and 10 others will be given honorable mention.

Of The Washington Post's 1200 carriers, at least 450 have been nominated. Judging will be based on such qualities as delivering papers early and regularly despite the weather, putting the paper where the subscriber wants it, going about the route quietly to avoid awakening subscribers, being thoughtful and polite.

John J. Corson, circulation director, expressed regret at his inability to answer individually all nominations received.

Meanwhile, judging in the Greater National Capital Committee's courtesy contest was launched yesterday. More than 1100 letters have been received describing acts of courtesy rendered by local residents.

The Board of Trade Committee, which wound up its contest at midnight Wednesday, will sponsor a rally at 8 p. m. Monday in Constitution Hall. Winners will be announced there. Allen Funt and his "Candid Microphone," broadcast weekly coast to coast, will appear on the program. There will be other entertainment, no admission charge.

fifth session on the Tamm nomination.

Of the 10, only one indicated he would favor Tamm's appointment. This witness was James J. Laughlin, Washington attorney.

Laughlin later told the committee he believed Tamm was the "sort of man who would not let his FBI association influence his decisions on the bench." He accused the bar association of trying to "dictate" the appointment.

Prescott Dennett, who figured in the mass sedition case during World War II and who said he now operates a press clipping service in Washington, opposed the nomination. He charged the FBI and Justice Department had failed to return letters and documents and other property which they had taken in connection with the sedition case, even though the defendants were acquitted.

As the hearing opened in the Senate Office Building, Chairman Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) questioned Tamm at length about his admittance to the Minnesota Bar in 1943.

Senate Votes Down Two Oleo Riders

Republicans Deny Conflict Between Tax Cut And Preparedness, Determine to Pass Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate refused twice yesterday to slash oleomargarine taxes but rolled a 4.8-billion-dollar individual income tax cut toward final passage today.

A proposal to repeal the Federal margarine levies and another to cut them were brushed aside by two identical 45-to-33 roll-call votes.

With defeat of the margarine riders, Senate Finance Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) predicted the GOP's big individual tax cut will clear the Senate today.

Senator Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) meanwhile abandoned his four-billion-dollar Democratic substitute for the Republican measure, and announced he would vote against any reduction at all.

Barkley Doubts Surplus

"If Congress does all of the things the President recommended (in his world crisis message) it would come so near to absorbing any surplus that it would be dangerous to try," Barkley told reporters.

Earlier 32 Republican Senators, in a formal party conference, decided to go right ahead with the individual tax cut despite Mr. Truman's preparedness recommendations.

Millikin said the Republican conference saw no conflict between the tax cut and the President's program. Millikin argued the budget surplus will be big enough to take care of any military spending required.

Calls Cut Spur to Economy

He later told the Senate the bill would strengthen the Nation's economy and stimulate production. With the critical turn in world events, he said that was a good reason for passing the tax cut.

The two oleo amendments were offered by Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) and J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.). Fulbright moved to repeal all Federal taxes on oleo. He said the tax not only boosts prices for low income consumers but "violates all the principles of a free economy."

Maybank tried to cut the tax on colored oleo from ten cents to one-quarter cent a pound and repeal the license fees. He said powerful special interests are restraining an otherwise competitive industry "and the people do not intend to keep quiet any longer."

Tax Bill Passage Certain

Millikin replied that excise tax changes had no place in a personal income tax bill. Two roll calls in succession killed both amendments by the same vote.

Only one major amendment now remains in the path of a final passage vote—a move by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) to revive corporation excess profits taxes as an inflation check.

Final passage of the bill was taken for granted and Republicans continued to claim enough votes to override a veto. Democrats said an overrider is more doubtful than ever in view of the President's call for military preparedness.

Barkley predicted the vote to sustain a veto will be larger than the vote against passage. A two-thirds majority is needed.

Senate vs. House

Conferees Begin Rent Battle Today

Senate and House conferees will meet this afternoon for the first round of the battle between the two houses over whether or not to toss Federal control over rent raises out the window.

Seven House conferees appointed yesterday have instructions to insist that local boards will have supreme authority over rent control. The House extended controls until April 1, 1949, but gave local boards the power to junk them in their areas as soon as they want to.

Five Senate conferees are under instructions to retain the power of the Federal Housing Expediter to veto rent increases granted by local boards, and to extend controls until May 1, 1949.

The conferees vote as a unit—one vote each for the House and Senate.

Senate conferees are solidly of the opinion that the "local option" feature of the House measure is unconstiuttional and an improper delegation of Federal authority to a local body.

Of the seven House conferees, two are in agreement with the Senate position, and a third is likely to be.

During debate on the bill in the House, Representative John C. Kunkel (R., Pa.) expressed doubt that the "local aption" provision would be held constittuional, and Representative Brent Spence (D., Ky.) was also opposed to it.

House supporters of the stronger Senate bill believe Representative Wright P atman (D., Tex.) will be persuaded to agree with them.

Big Muscles Found No Guide To Man's Fitness

Chicago, March 18 (AP).—Big muscles do not necessarily make a man fit.

Neither do sharp eyes, keen ears or a strong heart.

The reason, says a subcommittee of the Baruch Committee on Physical Medicine, is that "the only final test of fitness seems to be the ability to perform the task desired without undue fatigue or exhaustion."

"Mr. Muscles" and other conventional health specimens might crack up under the nervous or emotional tension some jobs cause. Some persons with thick glasses or hearing aids can perform certain tasks without any trouble.

Soviet Plan to Rebuke MacArthur Rejected

By the United Press

The Allied Far Eastern Commission last night recjected a Russian motion to censure Gen. Douglas MacArthur for sending a Japanese representative to an interal conference at Geneva without FEC premission.

Soviet Ambassador Alexander Panyushkin, who called for the official rebukes was the only member of the 11-nation commission to vote for it. Eight other representatives on the FEC, which sets Allied policy for Japan, cast their ballots against it and two members abstained.

Fairfax Policeman Breaks Ribs in Crash

A Fairfax County policeman suffered two broken ribs yesterday morning when his motorcycle collided with a car in Oakton, Va., and careened 70 feet into a tree.

Police said Officer Roland E. Heath, 22, of Vienna, was going south on Route 123 about 7:30 a. m. when a State Highway Department car driven by C. S. Mackey, jr., and going in the opposite direction, made a left turn directly in front of him. Mackey was charged with reckless driving.

"I've seen the same famous label on 57 fine spices and 31 flavoring extracts—so take a tip from me for a finer cup of tea!"

Finding Woman in Trunk Spurs Police Hunt

Venice, Calif., March 18 (AP).—The strange life of the occupants of 7 Avenue 20 drew the attention today of homicide detectvies armed with shovels.

They dug in the soft sand surrounding the seaside home where a cringing 27-year-old woman was found in a trunk yesterday and where, officers charge, two children had been held in virtual captivity.

In jail were two spinsters, Marie Clavey, 60, and Josephine Vella, 58, who lived in a three-room apartment with the three emaciated occupants, 27 canaries, 10 guinea pigs and two dogs.

A week ago, police found John Joseph Wayne, 11, shivering in girl's clothing, on a curbstone. He led them to the house where he said he had been kept prisoner for years.

Yesterday the women were arrested.

Policewoman Doris Perkins quoted Miss Claver:

"If you're going to arrest me, somebody's going to have to take care of my birds, my dogs, the guinea pigs—and Edna."

"What is Edna?" the police asked.

"She's in that trunk," was the reply.

Opening it, they found a woman identified as Edna Bessie Dinsmore, described as "underdeveloped and with the mentality of an unschooled 7-year-old." Police quoted Miss Clavey as saying she had been left at their nursing home when she was 2 weeks old

The Wayne boy, who weighed only 48 pounds, also was left by his mother when he was 2 weeks old, the woman said.

At Gallinger

Judges Act To Hasten Sanity Study

The Municipal Court judges yesterday adopted procedure aimed at easing the overload of Gallinger Hospital psychiatric facilities by speeding up handling of cases sent there for observation.

The Commissioners asked that something be done about the "unnecessarily long period" of detention at Gallinger, even after psychiatrists have completed diagnosis and have reported to the court.

Chief Judge George P. Barse wrote to Commissioner John Russell Young yesterday that the judges were confident the new system would "alleviate the situation."

The standard commitment period is 30 days. Under the new plan, the defendant will be removed from the hospital as soon as he is declared sane, sent to District Jail, and his case set down for hearing. If he is found to be insane, the court will set a lunacy hearing.

According to Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert, District alienist, 70 to 80 per cent of the cases are found mentally sound. Nonetheless, they must stay at the hospital for 28 to 32 days.

Bell Offers 3-Point Program For Chest Success in Future

Three ways to send future Community Chest Federation drives over the top were outlined yesterday by Federation President Daniel W. Bell.

Bell

He proposed:

1. Getting more business employes in the Capital area to kick through with larger individual contributions.

2. Making "substantial economies" within the six Chest and their agencies.

3. Doing a job of "realistic budgeting" to meet minimum needs with a campaign goal that is a "practical objective."

Those steps, Bell said, lead the federation "now at a crossroads"—to greater strength, effectiveness, efficiency and economy in raising and spending money for health and welfare purposes.

225 Hear Annual Report

Bell's proposals were outlined before some 225 officers and members of the Community Chest Federation assembled at the Commerce Department auditorium to hear his annual report.

Earlier, campaign chairman E. H. Foley, jr., handed over to Bell a check for $3,323,845—net result of the 1948 drive, and 14.8 per cent below its $3,900,000 quota.

The federation president disclosed thatindividual contributions to the drive here averaged $2.55, while the national per capita average was $3.21. Over the Nation, those who gave $100 and more met 64.1 per cent of the country's goals. But in Greater Washington, donations of $100 and over amounted to only 38.8 per cent of the Chest's goal.

He deplored the fact that only 40 per cent of business employes in this area contributed a per capita gift of $1.87 each. Some 144,000 business workers, he said, did not give at all.

Against the record he balanced contributions by Federal workers: well over 90 per cent of Government workers came through with a per capita gift of $6.23.

One to Seek More Funds

He declared last fall's Chest failure had led one of its agencies, the Hospital Council, to announce it must seek additional funds for 1948.

Campaign Chairman Foley, in making the financial report, announced the following net results, unit by unit:

Business Unit I raised $1,202,544 of its $1,532,500 quota, or 78.4 per cent. Business Unit II raised $140 over its $75,000 goal. Government Unit reached 96.4 per cent of its quota, collecting $1,309,452 of its $1,357,800 goal. Residential Unit raised $448,491, or 89.7 per cent of its $499,760 goal.

Alexandria collected $52,292—90 per cent of the $58,000 it sought. Arlington collected $49,501, or 93.4 per cent of its $53,000 quota. Fairfax, with a goal of $43,200, made 70.1 per cent, or $30,308. Montgomery raised $113,786, which was 91.7 per cent of its $124,000 goal. Prince Georges collected 96.2 per cent of its $44,000 goal, raising $42,328.

Jap Strikers Get Poem as Answer To Pay Demands

Tokyo, March 18 (U.P.).—A Japanese government official today tried a new way of settling industrial disputes. He recited poems.

When representatives of striking communications workers called on Communications Minister Eiji Tomiyoshi for wage increases, he recited his newest 31-syllable poems.

In classical rhymeless and rhythmless verse, the minister expressed concern over the livelihood of the 400,000 communications workers and their families.

The union delegates suggested the minister spend more time thinking of union demands and less composing poems.

"Poetry enriches life," Tomiyoshi replied.

Lodge Suspended For Failure to Keep Records Up to Date

Members of the United States Special Police Lodge, No. 647, of the American Federation of Government Employes (AFL) may vote soon on whether to break ties with the parent union.

This was announced yesterday by Capt. Leroy Westbury, president of the lodge which was suspended March 1 by the national union.

According to Mrs. Berniece B. Heffner, national secretary-treasurer of AFGE, the local lodge was suspended because of its failure to furnish monthly membership statements and pay initiation fees and per capita taxes.

In letters to members of the lodge, sent out earlier this month, Mrs. Heffner wrote that officers of the lodge have been directed to return all books, papers, seal, charter, bookkeeping and financial records to the AFGE, as well as any balance in the lodge's treasury.

She charged that the lodge had failed to comply with the national constitution since August, 1946.

National officers met with officers of the lodge Tuesday night, but according to Captain Westbury "nothing definite" was decided and the meeting was adjourned until a later date.

Captain Westbury said members of the lodge's executive board might meet over the weekend to decide whether to recommend a referendum to the lodge membership on disaffiliating with AFGE.

He said his unit has refused to pay the per capita tax to the AFGE "because for the past six or seven years they have taken absolutely no action on the legislative program which they were authorized to undertake."

Legislative aims of the lodge, Captain Westbury said, have been for reclassification of grades, the designation of "building police" for all guards and a law under which the Government would furnish shirts, ties and socks to the special police.

Seven Dental Assistants Are Honored

Seven dental assistants were honored yesterday as the District Dental Society wound up a five-day post graduate clinic at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mrs. Ann W. Wildman of 70 Bates st. nw., was awarded the society's outstanding achievement trophy for the second year in a row.

Awards for the best clinic presentations during the dental meeting were presented to Miss Dorothy Heatwole, 6645 Georgia ave. nw., Miss Margaret Hibble, 726 Upshur st. nw., and Mrs. Stella Sunde, 2025 I st. nw. Honorable mention for their clinics was awarded to Mary V. Allen and Peggy Edwards, both of 5040 1st st. nw., and Lorraine Wood, 1623 S st. nw. Miss Hibble won second clinic prize for the third straight year.

At the day's highlight luncheon, Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.) attacked President Truman's draft and universal military training proposal, and warned that "dollars will never stop communism—friendship that has to be purchased is not to be trusted."

Senate Group Approves State Tidelands Bill

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A bill to make the States owners of their oil-rich coastal tidelands was approved by a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee yesterday after a month-long battle.

The measure is headed for a certain presidential veto if it is eventually approved by Congress. It is similar to a bill that President Truman vetoed last year.

In addition, a recent Supreme Court decision has been interpreted by Attorney General Tom C. Clark as giving the United States absolute ownership of the tidelands located under coastal waters of the United States.

Under the bill, States, principally California and Texas, would be given title to coastal lands between the mean low tide and the three-mile limit.

Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug recently estimated that these lands contain as much as 100 billion barrels of oil, nearly five times as much as the proved reserves on the continent. These reserves, he said, are vital to the national defense and security of the United States, and belong to all the people of this country.

Krug told the subcommittee he was "certain" President Truman would veto the bill if it reached his desk.

The three-man subcommittee voted approval after a heated tussle between Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.), who opposes it, and Chairman E. H. Moore (D., Okla.) who favors it. Moore was joined in approving the measure by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.).

Donnell protested a decision by Moore to end the hearings.

"I don't intend to be bulldozed or bullyragged any more by the Senator from Missouri," snapped Moore.

Shouting that he resented "very strongly any implication that I have bulldozed this committee," Donnell threatened to take the fight to the Senate floor.

The spat quieted down when Moore agreed to hold the hearings open for an afternoon session yesterday.

ward Building, said frankly last night that he had no background of aviation experience. He said he assumed that none was needed—that the job was primarily an administrative one.

"If experience in the field of aviation is a prerequisite," O'Connell said, "I'm afraid they have the wrong fellow."

Landis, the last chairman, likewise was lacking in an aviation background when he joined the CAB. He had first come to Washington to be a member of the early Roosevelt "brain trust." President Truman's failure to reappoint Landis was widely criticized by Democratic liberals.

The White House never explained publicly why Landis was dropped. Landis himself, in a statement, referred to his "differences with other members of the Government," but did not elaborate.

President Truman, in mid-January, nominated Maj. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, a brilliant Air Force officer, for the CAB chairmanship, but the Senate refused to go along. Its Armed Services Committee voted down Mr. Truman's proposal that Kuter be allowed to draw his $15,144 a year airman's pay while holding the $10,000-a-year civilian post.

O'Connell, the chairman-designate, was born 42 years ago at Saranac Lake, N. Y. He won a B. S. degree in economics at the University of Vermont and a law degree at the Fordham University School of Law.

He was admitted to the New York bar in 1931 and practiced in that city until 1933, when he came to Washington. From 1933 to 1938 he was with the Public Works Administration, handling legal problems. In '38 he transferred to the legal division of the Treasury Department and worked his way up until, in May, 1944, he succeeded Randolph Paul as general counsel.

After serving under Secretaries Morgenthau, Vinson and Snyder, O'Connell left the Treasury last summer to enter private practice. He is a member of the District of Columbia bar.

Hospital Situation Deplored

A member of the medical staff of the Bureau of Tuberculosis Control yesterday labeled the District's hospital situation "deplorable."

Dr. T. A. Williston, in a panel discussion sponsored by the Metropolitan Committee for Public Health Nursing Week, pointed out that in many cases of incurable ailments "it's really almost worth a life to get a patient into the hospital."

He claimed that the average wait for a tuberculosis patient seeking admission to a hospital is at least a month. During this waiting period, he said the patient "entirely in the hands of the public health nurse.' "

Others on the panel were: Miss Lucile Petry, chief, division of nursing, U. S. Public Health Service; Miss Regina Dix, education supervisor, Prince Georges County Health Department; Miss Inga Koski, staff nurse, D. C. Health Department; Miss Charlotte Hazelbush, education director, Instructive Visiting Nurse Society of the District; and Mrs. Alexander P. Guyol, vice chairman, Metropolitan Committee for Public Health Nursing Week.

The meeting was held in the Archives Bldg. National Public Health Nursing Week will be held April 11 to 17.

District Rents

Senator Cain, who seems obsessed with his proposal for a "voluntary" 15 per cent rent increase, is now attempting to have this written into the District rent control law. We hope that his congressional colleagues will overrule him. For whatever the merits or demerits of this suggestion with respect to rents on a national scale, they do not apply here. The District of Columbia has been operating under a separate law which has facilitated rent adjustments when landlords can show increased costs. Approximately 65 per cent of the rental units in Washington have undergone some adjustment in rates since the local law was put into effect in 1942. On apartments the increases have averaged between 7 and 8 per cent. Since the "voluntary" increases Senator Cain talks about are seldom voluntary in practice, to add such a provision to the local law would amount to an outright gift to landlords. Moreover, an additional 15 per cent increase pyramided on top of existing increases would work positive hardship on Government employes whose salaries have by no means kept pace with the cost of living—a hardship that might in turn be reflected in local business conditions.

The present District law recognizes the right of both tenants and landlords to bring cases before rent examiners. If either party disapproves of the examiner's decision it has the right to take the case to the rent control administrator. His ruling subsequently may be appealed to the Municipal Court. How fairly the law has worked may be judged by the fact that of more than 50,000 controversies disposed of since 1942, fewer than 100 have been appealed to the court and in only one instance has the administrator been overruled. Nor is there a large backlog of undecided cases.

Housing pressure in the District is no less acute now than it was a year ago. This fact, coupled with the additional consideration that the existing law is working well, is compelling reason for extending the local Rent Control Act in substantially its present form. It is possible to see some merit in two amendments offered by a Senate District Subcommittee to decontrol transient hotel rooms and all new construction. However, a third amendment decontrolling all housing converted to apartments is not in this category. It would pave the way for great abuse by persons who, by changing a few doors and installing a few locks, would be free to exact rents in excess of those charged for regular apartment units. This amendment, along with Senator Cain's gratuity, should be eliminated, we believe, from the extension law. Altogether we hope both the House and Senate will divorce their consideration of the local situation from the unsatisfactory action on rent control nationally and will see the advantage of keeping a good law unhampered.

The Last Man

It is reported that Mr. Clarence Booth, a machine-shop proprietor of Lakewood, N. J., has designed and is now constructing an underground refuge against an anticipated bombardment by atom bombs. He is building the shelter at a site 287 feet above sea-level and it is to have a glass roof about one half story above the ground calculated to resist all radioactivity. The interior will be completely airproof, and equipped with an underground dynamo to provide heat for cooking and current for lighting. Presumably there will be plentiful supplies of food, oxygen and whatever else is necessary for the preservation of life during the period of bombardment.

Mr. Booth is described as an inventor of ingenuity who devised and produced various gadgets for the Army and Navy useful in the recent war. Thus, as far as technical details are concerned, it may be presumed that he knows what he is doing. What interests us particularly, however, is the statement attributed to Mr. Booth, that he expects, if there is an atom bomb attack, to be the only survivor.

It is in this important particular, of course, that his case is distinguished from that of the Patriarch Noah when, acting on advance intimations of the deluge, he began to construct his three-decker ark, fixed up within and without with pitch. Noah, you recall, made room not only for his wife and their four sons and four daughters-in-law, but also for two of every sort of living thing. Thus after the waters had subsided and all hands had stepped ashore on the summit of Mount Ararat, it was hardly any time at all—just a matter of a few dozen generations—before the earth was repopulated, and the descendants of Noah were busy again at the old games of politics and technical progress.

But we infer from the news dispatch Mr. Booth is unmarried or at any rate childless and has no plans for collecting any of the fauna of North Central New Jersey or for extending the hospitality of his bomb-proof refuge to his neighbors. Thus, presumably, he will have the distinction of being the last existing specimen of homo sapiens, and as far as we are concerned he is welcome to it.

Europe's Germany

From its inception advocates of the Marshall Plan realized that their program for assisting European recovery was intimately bound up with German recovery—specifically with a revival of the vital industries of the Ruhr and the Rhineland. However, it was by no means certain that recognition of the importance of Germany as a recovery pacemaker would insure acceptance of an integrated recovery program giving proper consideration to Germany's claims. Consequently we suggested that representatives of the occupied areas of western Germany—Germans as well as officials representing the occupying powers—should be invited to become founder-members of the permanent organization of Marshall Plan nations.

At last an invitation has been extended to the western zones of Germany by the nations participating in the current Paris conference. The Anglo-American and the French occupied zones have been asked to become independent participating members in the joint organization that is being set up for achieving the objectives of the recovery program. Occupation officials, assisted by German experts, will help to draft the charter of the permanent organization and to work out multilateral agreements. The occupied zones will also be represented on the various intergovernmental bodies established for ERP purposes. As a result of such close contacts, opportunities will be afforded for ironing out differences of opinion and resolving conflicts of interest.

The allocation of ERP funds will entail many difficult decisions. Rival claims must be constantly weighed and compromises effected. Such decisions are especially hard to make when the claims of the occupied areas are in question. If those areas are to make a maximum contribution to European recovery, it is essential that their needs should neither be unduly subordinated to the demands of other beneficiaries, nor given undue preference over other claimants. The handling of the European Recovery Program as an integrated whole, which will be facilitated by the inclusion of the occupied zones in the permanent organization, is the best possible insurance that, in future, the requirements of Germany will be more realistically appraised, with resultant benefits to Europe as a whole.

Foiled Again

We said a few days ago that the chances of success of the movement to repeal the Federal taxes on margarine have never been so promising as at present. But we underrated the strength of the organized opposition of the dairy interests and its power to choke off legislation. It is waste of time to reiterate the sound arguments in favor of repeal, in view of the action of the House Agriculture Committee in shelving all the bills providing for reduction or elimination of the discriminatory taxes on margarine. Eventually, we still believe that the pressure of an aroused public opinion, plus the pressure of rival farm groups producing materials used in making margarine, will force Congress to repeal the margarine taxes. But there is slight hope that any of the bills can be brought to a vote by a discharge petition during the present session. The committee's decision to pigeonhole the bills is a disheartening example of what Representative Poage, a leader in the fight against the margarine tax, rightly calls "political cowardice"—that is, fear of alienating farm voters in an election year.

Executive Papers

There would be real misfortune in a tug-of-war between President and Congress over disclosure of the information gathered in the course of investigations of the loyalty of Federal employes. Responsible members of Congress can no more seek such disclosure, we are convinced, than the President himself. For the consequences of it would inevitably be impairment of the effectiveness of the FBI, vitiation of the loyalty investigation program and gross injustice to individuals accused but not convicted of disloyalty.

Senator Hickenlooper could scarcely have been thinking of these consequences in saying Tuesday that he would fight the President's directive to keep loyalty files confidential. The Senator based his challenge on that portion of the Atomic Energy Act which authorizes the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy "to utilize the services, information, facilities, and personnel of the departments and establishments of the Government." This is language designed to avoid wasteful duplication of activities. But to construe it as designed to empower the committee to command any establishment of the Government in any way the committee sees fit would be to construe the committee as the supreme authority of the land. Under this construction, it could direct the movements of the United States Navy in addition to ordering the activities of the FBI.

It is an essential attribute of the independence which the Constitution confers upon the Executive Branch of the Government that the chief of that branch, the President, should be able to communicate with his subordinates in confidence. Legislation such as that proposed by Representative Hoffman, which would make all confidential Government files available to congressional committees, would be, in effect, legislation to subvert the independence of the Executive. As such, we have no doubt, it would be called unconstitutional by the courts.

It goes without saying, of course, that executive cooperation with the Legislature in making relevant information available is an essential of good government. The President ought to extend to Congress whatever material it seeks when he can do so without danger to security and without injustice to individuals. But he ought not—and cannot—be deprived of his constitutional right to exercise discretion in this respect.

Reactions To Truman

From now on the impact upon Soviet Russia and free Europe of the Truman preparedness program will be studied with care. Mr. Gromyko in New York said the program was obviously destined for home consumption. Does he really believe this? Is this the reaction in the Kremlin? We doubt it, yet nobody can say for sure. All we know is that, if the answer is in the affirmative, then war would be a certainty. Aggression feeds upon itself, but it breeds on a misreading of the opposition. Hitherto Stalin and his brothers appear to have thought that the United States is incapacitated by its internal divisions. These latter are in the background when seen in America. They are part and parcel of the democratic process. But looked at from Moscow the sound and fury make up the whole picture of America. Add the addiction of dictators to yes-men, add the Marxist determinism in which the Communists believe, and you have an idea of the distortion in the Politburo's view of what is going on in America.

A lightning flash of Kremlin thinking on America was disclosed in the well-known story of the Soviet Ambassador Panyushkin's visit with Ambassador Bedell Smith before the Russian came to his new post in Washington. We have reported it before. It is worth repetition. Bedell Smith ran through a list of presidential contenders in reply to the Soviet Ambassador's request. Mr. Wallace was not on the list. "But," said the Ambassador, "you have left out the most formidable contender of all, Mr. Wallace." Bedell Smith looked blank. Evidently the Soviet emissary already had been educated about American chances by his chiefs in the Kremlin. This misunderstanding is the greatest danger to the world's peace. When Stalin looks at America, his vision is obscured by Mr. Wallace. If Mr. Wallace, who is going from folly to folly, were to quit, the shock in Moscow, in our belief would be electric. Nothing short of an atomic bomb would be more likely to produce a sense of realities. Alas, Mr. Wallace seems to be a prisoner of his following, and is doubtless the main reason for the fixed idea in the Kremlin that America is cracking up.

Joseph and Stewart Alsop the other day called for a course of shrieking in Stalin's ear. Unless Stalin is totally deaf, he must have heard a national rumble when he read the Truman speech. He ought also to be told that this program represents the triumph of the moderates in the Truman Administration. There were plenty of extremists in high places who wanted a showdown. And the argument of this action-now school was cogent. It was based on the pathology of aggression as revealed in the war experience of recent history. If aggression is not nipped in the bud, it grows of its own volition, and war becomes inevitable. The counterargument which won out is that you have to be equipped for the consequences in case your bluff is called. The Truman speech was aimed at mobilizing equipment, both in strength and in popular support, in case a showdown becomes necessary.

The Truman prescription was, we feel, the wiser course. Not only is the country in no military posture as yet to risk a showdown; the political chances of winning agreement to a stronger program would have been slight. Hence this minimal program. It was tuned to a calculation of acceptability. Events furnish an irrefutable argument that nothing less than the Truman program will enable the legislators to retain a clear conscience that they are carrying out their duty to the American people. Refusal to act, and to act promptly, on it would compound the danger of doing nothing. It would backfire in the American face.

Nonaction would likewise leave free Europe out on a limb. It would be more than an invitation to Moscow to walk in; it would reduce the will-to-resist of the free Europeans. And resistance and unity were encouraged by the Truman speech. To be sure, first reactions have been mixed. The British seem to understand that demonstration is far more important than guaranties. Guaranties are words, and words are perilous reeds when the aggressor is on the march. What came through to the British was that the mere submission of such a program—which, though moderate in the circumstances, is at the same time unparalleled—is testimony to the fact that the first Soviet success in free Europe would inevitably transfer American action to the scene of aggression. Elsewhere the reaction was not so knowledgeable. France, with its passion for the written pledge, was disappointed that no guaranty was forthcoming. But when what is proposed is thought over, we dare say that the readiness to act, as well as the inevitability of action, will be perceived. If that is not plain to the aggressor, surely it is plain to the beleaguered.

Truman's Address

Seldom, if ever, has the opportunity been afforded a man to speak his convictions with the courage with which President Truman delivered his message to Congress Wednesday. It was a unique message, in that he declared "war" on Russia without immediate force of arms. The effects will be far-reaching. And they will be good. The peoples of Europe, Asia and the rest of the world now know just where the Government of the United States stands. It is left to the American people to let the world know that they are in full accord with the principles of the President of their country.

Mr. Truman went just far enough with the Congress. He neither shirked the duty of his office as he interpreted it, nor did he infringe upon the prerogatives of the Congress. He laid the responsibility for action squarely where it belongs, in the lap of the legislators. And he did so with the flat announcement that his words were not political.

Woe betide the solon who tries to make "politics" of such an epic utterance. His chances of survival in coming elections would be exactly zero, if he did. If ever the Congress of these United States had a chance to act in wholehearted accord with the feelings of the majority of Americans, that time is now. Let him who sits in a seat of legislation take warning.

Composers' Recital

Your critic, Paul Hume, has once again, with his uncanny accuracy, missed the point. With the familiar leer, he suggests that the recital had all the styles of a drawing by Helen Hokinson; and after listening to the coming and going of performers and accompanists, for as long as he felt he decently could, Mr. Hume left the concert hall, taking his poisonous breath with him.

Concerning the recital there is this to be said. Of all the concerts given in Washington during a given season the recital of the works of the native composers might well be rated as the most important musical event of the lot. What earthly good does it do anyone to read Mr. Hume commenting week by week that Casadesus was, brilliant, that Ormandy had reached new heights, that Lotte Lehman defied description? In the field of the greatest artists of our time the post-mortem of the critics is a form of parasitical hurrah that adds nothing to the magnificence of the particular concert.

But give the critics a situation in which there is really room for criticism, for appraisal, for judgment, leading to the encouragement of the making of new musical literature by those in our midst filled with talent, and what happens? They dislike what they hear. They therefore condemn. This is, I believe, largely an inability to make a fair analysis of the unknown. It may be an exaggeration to slip the mantle of Schubert or Richard Strauss or Hugo Wolf onto the shouders of our Washington composers; but the composers quite definitely rated a hearing and an encouraging judgment, not a kick in the pants.

Fuel Oil Prices

This correspondent wishes to direct attention to, and elicit an explanation of, the curious fact that the current price of first grade fuel oil is about 8 per cent above the current price of gasoline.

The present price of gasoline (at wholesale) is 14½ cents per gallon in this area, plus 7½ cents tax; while first grade fuel oil is between 15½ and 16 cents per gallon. No such discrepancy is justified by the cost of production of fuel oil as against gasoline. On the contrary, a much more elaborate and expensive refining process is required to produce gasoline than is required to produce fuel oil. Moreover, the cost of and loss from handling gasoline exceed those entailed in transporting and handling fuel oil.

Admittedly, the soaring demand for fuel oil has resulted in a situation which permits the oil companies to exact prices which discriminate against the user of fuel oil as opposed to the user of gasoline; but, on the assumption that the oil companies pursue a rational pricing policy (i. e., a policy of adjusting relative prices to relative costs), it is difficult to see any necessity or justification for this odd and discriminatory price situation. Surely the best public interests of the oil industry demand publication of a full explanation.

Unemployment Claims

Recently I went to the District Unemployment Board to report on my unemployment claim. I made my claim on February 24, and was told I was to report every two weeks. On my calling there again they said some mistake had been made and that I should report on March 17, despite the fact that I reported as required on my slip and was kept waiting over two hours. I am to call March 31 to receive my first check, provided I have not obtained employment before that time. In other words, I am to receive my first money five weeks after I have made my claim.

What is the use of unemployment benefit given out under such conditions? JOHN G. RAND.

"I Shall Return"

Why do you publish such a picayunish attack on General MacArthur as was made by Philip H. Klepak in his letter of March 15? I suppose that if General MacArthur had used the royal word "We," as was suggested by Mr. Klepak, he would have been condemned by his enemies as undemocratic or as "ambitious," as Julius Caesar was condemned.

Religion In The Schools

This controversy over religion in the public schools is being carried on, as I see it, without regard to basic principles. All parties concerned are confusing religion with churches and creeds.

But religion is not such a narrow thing and can be completely divorced from church and creed. It is a fundamental instinct of man's spirit, the need of his spirit for contact with the one-ness of consciousness of which he is a part, and such contact can be denied him only to his harm.

Teaching school children that they are not merely physical bodies but spiritual beings as well, parts of a universe that also is both physical and spiritual, in no way brings in any church or creed, but without such teaching we fail our children. Such teaching, possibly in connection with some such subject as history, is plainly our duty in a world gone mad with materialism.

There is no use in teaching the "three Rs" unless you tie them in with morality; there is no use in teaching morality unless you show that it is merely the natural and most beneficial direction for man to take in his evolution. But there is no use in teaching at all unless we help the spirit of man to grow and develop and improve the world in which he lives.

MARY N. S. WHITELY.
Washington.

Many parents in Virginia and eight other States are relieved that the Supreme Court of the United States has dissolved the strange union of church and public school. No longer supported by the compulsory attendance laws of the public education system, denominational religious instruction may return to its proper sphere—the home and the church of one's choice.

It has commonly been assumed that weekday church schools were naturally conducted off school premises. Yet in 1940 the United States Office of Education reported that around 40 per cent of released time religious classes for the primary schools were held within public school buildings. The practice was largely based on local custom without legislative authority.

The Supreme Court ruling should correct the confusion created by intruding sectarian education in the public school system. With a clearcut separation of church and school, children can more readily distinguish matters of faith from those of scientific fact.

In the long run perhaps all will agree on the soundness of the point of view advanced so well by editorials in The Washington Post and now given support by the highest law of our land. The home and church will assume fully the responsibilities rightfully theirs. The public school can actively promote character training and good citizenship based upon shared experiences rather than indoctrination in moral theology.

DR. GEORGE E. BEAUCHAMP,
Leader, Washington Ethical Society.

It is unfortunate that Mrs. Vashti McCollum's name has come to be so closely associated with the Supreme Court's ruling on religious education in the public schools. Because of Mrs. McCollum's avowed atheism, many persons, like Mrs. Stout in The Washington Post of March 15, have lost sight of the real issue behind the court's decision. The real reason is that the Constitution provides for the complete separation of church and state—a provision of our Constitution that in recent years has been subject to infringement. It is the will of the American people, rather than the mere whim of Mrs. McCollum, that has wrought this decision.

None of us wishes to deprive children or adults of religious education—but we want to keep that right in the place where it belongs—in the churches.

DOROTHY W. FROHMAN.
Washington.

I wish to congratulate you on your March 13 editorial in defense of the decision of the Supreme Court in the Champaign, Ill., case recently decided forbidding the teaching of religion in the public schools. It appears that the advocates of the plan to use the public schools as an agency to teach religion were shocked at the decision of the Supreme Court, and feel that dire consequences will flow from this denial to teach religion in tax-supported schools.

That is the way many religious leaders felt 100 years ago, when the Government inaugurated the policy of general taxation for secular educational purposes only and promised the taxpayer that his funds should never under any circumstances be used to support the teaching of religion in the public schools. Many religious leaders alleged that our Government was following in the footsteps of atheistic France, in barring the teaching of religion at public expense. Some held that our youth would all turn out to be infidels.

But our forefathers stood pat on the principle of a complete and total separation of the church and the state, and in defense of the equality of all citizens and taxpayers before the law. They were bound that no taxpayer should be compelled to pay for the support of his own religion, much less for the support of a religion he did not believe in.

If the religious elements are allowed the privilege of using the public schools as a free agency to propagate their peculiar religious beliefs, then the infidel and atheists who are taxpayers should likewise be allowed to teach infidelity and atheism through the agency of our public school system. The state must remain neutral and permit all religions to live under equal and impartial laws.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Truman Message

WHAT President Truman said in his message to Congress should convince the tough-minded men who make up the Politburo in the Kremlin in Moscow that the United States will not permit the conquest of western Europe by Communist tyranny, whether by direct military means or by Trojan Horse infiltration.

The great majority of the American people have come to understand that the United States has a paramount interest in the freedom of western Europe. Should that area come under the domination of a single power with a far-reaching instrument of tyranny, then this country would be isolated.

There are, of course, dissenters from this view. Henry Wallace, going his blind way toward some obscure and mysterious destiny, is one of them. He moves further and further from reality with each week.

At the opposite pole are the old-time isolationists. Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio seemed to speak for them, a day or two before the President's message, when he said he could see no threat to this country that might bring war. The best answer to that was the cartoon showing the Taft head in the sand and the Taft rear rather plainly exposed to the world.

This is the same kind of isolationism that Taft expressed in the years before Pearl Harbor. The record is studded with his remarks—almost right up to the day of Pearl Harbor—to the effect that Japan had no aggressive intentions.

AT BOTH of these poles is a body of opinion. It includes honest pacifists and sincere isolationists who believe that the United States can best defend itself by ignoring the fate of Europe and building up vast armaments here at home.

How large this body of opinion is, no one can say with accuracy. But it is not large. Certainly the number of dissenters today is far smaller than the number in 1940 and '41, when the two oceans were still believed to be a barrier that no enemy could successfully overcome.

What is important now is quick action from Congress. This does not mean slavish acceptance of President Truman's recommendations. But no one can dispute that decay and deterioration have gone too far in our military establishment in view of the threat to the uneasy peace of the past two years.

In his initial reaction to the President's speech, Taft said nothing about reenactment of Selective Service other than that it would be given consideration. Taft has, of course, the power to decide what the Senate does.

Reluctance to take such a step so soon after VJ-Day is understandable, quite apart from the pressure of election-year politics. The gap to be filled by Selective Service is only about 235,000 men at present levels for the Army and Navy. The intention of the Department of National Defense is to limit the draft to younger men who are not veterans of World War II. They would be chiefly in the 19 to 20 age group.

THE PLAN now on paper is to avoid calling 18-year-olds who would be subject to military training under UMT. There is little probability, however, that this Congress will do anything about UMT. The wisdom of this measure at the present moment is doubtful in any event, since a great deal of trained manpower would be required to put it into operation.

With only 235,000 additional men needed, Congress is likely to boggle at putting the sweeping power of the draft back into the hands of the military. The immediate need, however, is not what United States military planners have primarily in view. They want Selective Service on the books, with the machinery set up. Then, in the event of a sudden emergency, it could be thrown into high gear.

One avenue of escape for unhappy Congressmen who may not want to vote on the draft this year is a super-duper Air Force such as has been recommended by at least two surveys. Undoubtedly our force in the air does needs to be expanded, particularly by building a strong aviation industry. But that can be no substitute for the minimum number of men to carry out American responsibilities and maintain at least a thin line of trained reserves.

In fact, approval of a super-duper Air Force, which would take a long time from the drawing board to the actuality, could contribute to the easy illusion that we are safe behind the wall of our superior technology. As the Russian glacier moves westward, no one can be excused for contributing further to that illusion.

There is little use in dwelling on past mistakes, such as the cry after VJ-Day to "bring the boys home." What is happening today is part of the cost of the complacence and unconcern of that time that now seems so infinitely far away.

Benes And Russia

A Communication

May I congratulate the reasoning of the March 3 Washington Post editorial "Soviet Aims," and its most timely publication of excerpts from the Benes memoirs. The editorial clearly demonstrated that the taking over of Czechoslovakia by the Soviet would not necessarily be followed by an all-out attack on western European countries and the United States. Secretary Marshall's recent statement, emphasizing that the situation is very serious, and that it therefore calls for cool judgment, expresses the same concern deploring the passions aroused by those who were unaware what was going on in Czechoslovakia for the last three years.

The memoirs of President Benes, published in The Washington Post last week, could enlighten anyone who is willing to face facts, that President Benes conceded to the Soviet the domination of Czechoslovakia's foreign policy in 1945 on the basis of treaties initiated by him in 1941 and 1943. He did so because the Soviet was willing to assist the narrow-minded imperialist Czech policy of President Benes to drive out four million Sudeten Germans and Hungarians from their native land where they and their ancestors had lived for centuries.

IT WAS obvious to all students of history that there would soon be a day of reckoning in a so-called "democracy" which deprived about one-third of the former population of Czechoslovakia—by due process of law, passed by Parliament and signed by President Benes and his Ministers—of their human liberties and their privilege to worship in their churches in their mother tongue. Their properties were confiscated and they were moved by the tens of thousands against their will from their ancestral soil to distant provinces for forced labor, for no other reason than that they were not Czechs or Slovaks—that is, they were not of the trusted Slavic race. Stalin and his representatives had very good legal precedence to ignore the rights of the Czech people after they had taken those of the Sudeten German and Hungarian minorities.

The Benes memoirs boast, that unlike the Poles and the Finns, the Czechs could work with the Soviet in harmony. He even condones in his memoirs the Soviet aggression against Finland in 1939 in the interest of democracy. Now that his own country is experiencing the Soviet kind of democracy, which caused Jan Masaryk to take his life rather than live and work in harmony with it, it is worth while to remember that it was Dr. Benes who published in 1917 the famous pamphlet: Destroy the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy.

HIS AIM was fulfilled in the peace treaties of 1919. But we may ask, was Czechoslovakia fathered by President Wilson in 1918 to become a generation later a nation of half Slavs and half slaves, to which level President Benes allowed it to sink with the cooperation of his Parliament in 1946?

Chauvinism and nationalistic policies pursued by Slavic nations are not less objectionable than those by Germans or Hungarians. The tragedy of Jan Masaryk, as well as that of Count Teleki, the Hungarian Prime Minister who committed suicide in April, 1941, rather than assist the Germans in their agression on Yugoslavia, proves that neither Czechs nor Hungarians could defend themselves against the superior and aggressive forces of German and Russian dictators, no matter under what ideological or national banner they seek to dominate central Europe.

In the nineteenth century the Czech people, under such wise leadership as that of Palacky, did not wish to destroy Austria. On the contrary, Palacky was famed for saying that if Austria did not exist, it would have to be invented to assure the peaceful development of the small Danubian peoples.

HISTORY does not march backward, so it is idle to speculate what might have been the fate of the Danubian peoples, had the narrow-minded chauvinistic policies of the small nations, heirs of the destroyed Austro-Hungarian monarchy, not made easy the way for the Nazi and Soviet dictators. These dictators inflicted all the brutalities of the police state on more than 50 million unhappy souls, who in the Austro-Hungarian monarchy knew law and order, and achieved, in the century between the Congress of Vienna and the beginning of the First World War, a prosperity and happiness equal or superior to all their neighbors. This was possible under those much abused antiquated institutions of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy and its rulers, under whom it was possible for Jan Masaryk, who took his life rather than be a Soviet stooge in 1948, to keep his rank as a first lieutenant in the Austro-Hungarian army, while his venerable father was condemned in absentia for advocating the destruction of the monarchy.

To the old and conservative —or if you please, feudal— Emperor Francis Joseph, who possessed all the faults and virtues of the Victorian era, in which period he ruled and kept together 50 million people in peace, it would have seemed odd to punish the innocent son for the high treason of the father, even if that treason would lead —as it did— to the destruction of his monarchy. The other now almost forgotten Czech patriot, Palacky, wanted to maintain that monarchy for the benefit of the small Danubian peoples—the Czechs, Slovaks, Austrians, Hungarians, Poles, etc.—all of whom are now victims of the ruthless and lawless Soviet masters whom President Benes trusted to establish real democracy in the Danube Valley.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

The Republican Choice

PRESIDENT Truman's speech to the Congress has made one thing plain. Barring some miraculous and wholly unexpected easing of the international tension, the great overriding issue which will confront the country in the next few months will concern the American response to Soviet expansion abroad. This issue will thus also confront the Republican National Convention in June, and it is sure to affect the outcome closely.

Moreover, it is increasingly probable that the convention will be asked to make a clear-cut choice between two distinct Republican schools of thought on foreign policy. The leader of one school of thought is Senator Robert A. Taft, the leader of the other, Senator Arthur Vandenberg. The evenly balanced division within the party on these two approaches to foreign policy was demonstrated by the Senate vote on the Taft amendment to ERP, which would have reduced the first year's appropriation to four billion dollars. The Republican Senators split almost exactly even on the vote.

The strength of the Vandenberg school is illustrated by the fact that Taft himself is reliably reported to believe that Vandenberg, rather than Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, is now the man to beat. Vandenberg apparently sincerely does not want the nomination and he has refused to lift a finger to get it. He underlined his refusal to "connive," to use his own word, a few weeks ago, when a group of wealthy and influential New York admirers approached him indirectly with an offer to organize and support a Vandenberg campaign. The offer was unconditionally rejected. Yet the Vandenberg boom continues regardless, and there is little doubt that Vandenberg will accept the nomina- if it is offered.

MOREOVER, the odds on Vandenberg's being nominated are measurably increased by the position of Harold E. Stassen. Stassen has not said so publicly but according to those close to him he is willing, and even eager, to accept a second place on a Vandenberg ticket if he fails to win the grand prize. Stassen should come to the convention with well over a hundred delegates. If, as now seems possible, it becomes clear that Stassen cannot get the nomination, this considerable Stassen following will form a solid base on which the Vandenberg cohorts can build.

There is, of course, no Vandenberg-Stassen preconvention deal. Indeed, the two men have had no contact whatsoever with each other in recent months. Yet the logic of the situation makes a Vandenberg-Stassen ticket an entirely serious possibility.

The nomination of such a ticket would be enormously significant, for it would mean that the traditional Republican foreign policy, the cautious (pinch-penny) Taft approach, had suffered a total defeat. Yet the nomination of Taft, or of another Republican who thinks more or less like him, is not to be ruled out. Taft's chances received a setback some weeks ago, when the neolithic Joseph Pew of Pennsylvania quietly called a conference of fellow fatcats in Cleveland, Ohio.

Pew and the other industrialists, mostly steel magnates of the more moss-backed type, reached the conclusion that in view of Taft's poor showing in the public opinion polls, he could not win the election. They, therefore, agreed to switch their support to House Majority Leader Joseph Martin. Martin's views are, in fact, more conservative than Taft's but he has not made the unequalled collection of enemies which Taft's outspoken honesty has earned him.

THE CLEVELAND meeting took place, however, before President Harry Truman started on his political toboggan slide. The Democratic disasters of the last few weeks have apparently demonstrated that, bar a miracle, it will be mathematically impossible for Truman to win reelection. This has undoubtedly helped the Taft candidacy. It has also been helped by the elegantly worded announcement of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's availability, about which some Taft supporters are openly jubilant. For MacArthur may well cut into the Dewey and Stassen strength in Wisconsin, and Taft will undoubtedly be second choice with most MacArthur delegates.

Martin has real strength, however, both among Republican fatcats of the Pew type, and in the influential and conservative House Republican leadership. Moreover, he has evinced a sudden interest in foreign policy. His emphasis on the military aspects of American foreign policy makes it possible that what will eventually emerge from the Senate-House conference on the ERP bill will represent, not a Vandenberg policy, but a Martin-Vandenberg policy. This would cut down Vandenberg's reputation as the undisputed foreign policy leader.

If the expected deadlock between Taft and Dewey develops, the Republican convention may thus become the scene of a crucial struggle between the two Republican schools of thought on foreign policy. Assuming that the Eisenhower withdrawal is permanent, there would be a clearcut choice between Vandenberg and Stassen on the one hand, and men of the stamp of Martin and MacArthur on the other. The importance of such a choice, to the United States and to the world, is difficult to exaggerate.

New Trial Urged

Bridgeport, Conn., March 18 (AP).—The Communist Party of Connecticut asked the State's congressional delegation today to seek a new trial for a Georgia Negro widow and her two sons who have been condemned to die in the slaying of a white farmer.

Building Firm, 3 City Aides Indicted on Veteran's Charge

Baltimore, March 18 (AP). — A grand jury investigation of GI housing today brought the indictment of a building firm and three city officials on charges they conspired to cheat and defraud veterans.

The accusations were against Herman F. Lucke, jr., former building engineer and now parks engineer for the city; Milton B. Malan, a city building inspector; Hanlon Homes, Inc., and five members of a family holding office in the firm — Edward A., Sidney, Harry, Julius and Esther Myerberg.

The name of a second building inspector could not be disclosed until he was arrested.

All the others posted $1000 bond each.

Court attaches said the eight presentments returned today were but the first of the charges which will be made by the grand jury.

It was instructed five weeks ago to make an inquiry.

Some 1900 veterans have informed their mortgage holders they will withhold further payments until adjustments are made.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation also is making an investigation. Attorney General Tom Clark initiated similar Federal action recently in Dallas, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and other cities.

In the basic presentment returned by the grand jury it charged the builders and the city officials "conspired to violate and permit violation" of the city's building code and thereby enabled the builders "to cheat, defraud and illegally acquire the monies and properties of the purchasers."

The malfeasance charge was that Lucke "corruptly failed, neglected and refused to perform and carry out his duties."

Another presentment accused the five builders of obtaining $1103 "by a false pretense" from a couple living in a housing development sponsored by the firm.

Today's action capped 18 months of agitation by veterans who charge they have been cheated on their new homes.

School Neglects 3 Rs, Parents Say

150 Protest Social Study Emphasis In Rockville Elementary Curriculum

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

A group of 150 Rockville, Md., parents has protested to school officials their children are getting too much social study and not enough of the three Rs.

The parents, whose children attend the Rockville Elementary School, claim their children "do not spell, write, read or do simple arithmetic with the proficiency they should."

Contending that Rockville Elementary is "from one to two years behind" a majority of 12 other elementary schools in the county surveyed by the group, the parents asked "immdiate" correction of teaching standards.

At a meeting Wednesday night, the parents presented a petition to Assistant School Superintendent E. M. Douglass, requesting improvement of the school curriculum.

Emphasizing the action was independent of the school's Parent-Teachers Association, Attorney Frank A. Tyler, jr., president of the P-TA and a leader in the "revolt," declared:

"We feel the fundamental principles of education have been sacrificed in favor of social studies. We have given the school board 15 days in which to reply in writing just what they intend to do to improve the conditions."

Tyler said Douglass had agreed to submit the written reply and had pledged "wholehearted cooperation" to try and improve conditions about which the parents complain.

"Low teaching standards have existed at the school for 15 years," Tyler continued, adding: "We have complained many times and have reached the point where we are tired of getting no results."

Admitting conditions are "not all they should be at the school," Douglass pointed out yesterday "there is room for improvement at every school."

"The parents have agreed to a plan for possible corrective action which was drawn up by teachers at the school and myself," he said.

Outlining the 5-point plan, which he said is similar to a county-wide program under way, the school official said it called for (1) improvement of physicial conditions at the school, (2) special attention to good room management, (3) particular attention to skilled subjects, which include the three Rs and spelling, (4) appointment of an auxiliary teacher to work with children of below standard achievement, and (5) a long-range basic testing plan to determine ability and achievement which will reveal specific faults in the curriculum if they exist.

Also active in the parents movement is Attorney Sumner Wood, of Rockville; Carl Binker, who presided at the meeting, and John B. Diamond 3d, who presented the petition.

Mark Hanna 3d Held by FBI

New Orleans, La., March 18 (AP). The arrest of Mark A. Hanna, III, on warrants accusing him of depositing $60,000 worth of forged checks, was announced by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Hanna

The FBI said Hanna was arrested in a hotel where he had registered under the name of Mark Harrington.

Hanna had $10,067.80 in cash on his person when two FBI agents walked into his hotel room, the FBI said. Hanna waived removal proceedings and returned to Buffalo to face prosecution. Bond was set at $25,000.

Hanna, 39-year-old great grandson of the late U. S. Senator Marcus Hanna (R., Ohio), was charged specifically with violation of the National Stolen Property act.

Hanna was accused of depositing two $30,000 checks bearing the forged signature of his uncle, C. H. Hanna, a Cleveland, O., industrialist.

Security Loan Drive Mapped At Parley Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Sparked by Secretary of Treasury Snyder's appeal for support, some of the Nation's leaders yesterday started tuning their multi-cylinder machine for a Government bond drive which will run from April 15 to June 30.

The new peacetime campaign was described as a way to curb inflation at home and Russia abroad.

Snyder urged support of the loan drive to stem inflation and build up economic security. He praised previous backing by various groups and asked continued cooperation.

AFL President Green declared the Nation must keep its economy strong to "halt the aggressive tide of Soviet expansion and prevent another war." The labor chief added that eight million AFI members will "back up American foreign policy by buying bonds with every dollar they can spare."

Leaders of business, agriculture and labor attended yesterday's all-day conference in the Statler here to draft plans for the "Security Loan" drive.

Joseph M. Dodge, president of the American Bankers Association, said the drive would prove that Americans can "voluntarily discipline themselves in critical peaceful periods as well as in time of war."

Winthrop Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, said the remedy for postwar inflation lies "not in reliance upon rationing or price controls but rather in the twofold action of increasing production and reducing the quantity of purchasing power." He indorsed the bond program as one important means of mopping up excess buying power.

The three-day conference will continue today with talks by Under-secretary of Treasury A. L. M. Wiggins, Secretary of Commerce W. Averell Harriman, Holgar J. Johnson, president of Institute of Life Insurance; Gen. Ralph M. Smith, president of United States Savings and Loan League, and others.

Military Manpower Pool Seen in Jobs Civilians Could Fill

The Army, Navy and Air Forces can find thousands of the military men they need right under their respective noses—in jobs in the departments that could be easily filled by civilians.

Officials who should know say that a very minimum of 25,000 and perhaps as many as 40,000 "civilian" jobs in the three services are now filled by military people—mainly enlisted men—the country over. It has been suggested that civilians be hired for these jobs and that the military people in them be assigned to active military service.

And there is very good reason to believe that the military services are sympathetic to the general idea, but they need the cooperation of Congress. Here's why: Before any large new group of civilians could be hired the Congress would have to do two things:

1. Either modify or wipe out the so-called Langer-Byrd rider which fixes a tight ceiling on the number of civilians the military services may hire and,

2. Appropriate sufficient funds to permit the three services to hire enough civilians to replace military people in "civilian" jobs.

Briefly, the big reductions in civilian personnel forced on the Army and Air Forces a year ago by Congress, in addition to the so-called Royall Plan, are now plaguing these two services.

If you'll recall, the report of the House Appropriations Committee a year ago was devoted mainly to the Army's civilian personnel and it slashed money for these jobs which forced a big lay-off. About the same time the department was going through the ordeal of the Royall Plan which slapped down civilian personnel. The plan, designed by Army Secretary Royall, forced the lay-off and downgrading of thousands of civilians in an arbitrary manner. But was the result?

The Army and Air Forces had jobs to do. Military people were brought in and told to do the civilian jobs when civilians weren't available. Thousands of jobs such as hospital attendants, firefighters, guards, skilled trades, and even typists and file clerks were filled by military men. It certainly isn't economy as it will cost more in the long run to have a military person in a civilian job.

Anyway, these military people are now needed by the services to man ships, operate airfields, train troops and the like. It's a good bet the services will seek authority from the Congress which would permit them to do it.

Outside the possible recreation of Selective Service, inside Federal officials say they don't foresee any sizable increase in Government employment. They see the President's defense program as a stabilizing factor in the employment picture. In other words, the Government this year definitely won't be faced with making large lay-offs in personnel as it has for the past several years. Also, the jobs of most war service and temporary employes are safer than they were.

HOLIDAY: The House Civil Service Committee yesterday gave its approval to the Hagen bill which would make Friday, December 24, a holiday for Federal workers. The bill was placed on the House calendar and it will be called up for consideration in 10 days. Christmas this year falls on a Saturday, a nonwork day in Government, which means Federal workers would be given no holiday unless the Hagen bill is approved.

RETIREMENT: Through the courtesy of Representative John W. Heselton (R., Mass.), we have here at The Washington Post several thousand copies of the Civil Service booklet that explains the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Retirement Act. You may have a copy merely by asking the girl for one at the front counter inside The Washington Post Building. Copies are free and you can thank Representative Heselton for them. Heselton also has offered to supply copies to his colleagues in Congress. No phone calls, please.

NOTES: Robert Y. Phillips has been appointed administrative assistant at the Census Bureau. He was chief of field operations . . . Dr. Edgar Fuller is the new director of school administration in the United States Office of Education. He was New Hampshire State Commissioner of Education . . . The House Civil Service Committee today will release a staff report which will be critical of many personnel offices in Federal agencies.

VETERANS: The other day I reported here that a veteran, Loren H. Wittner, had won a decision to be paid for salary he lost when he was illegally fired by the Army. The decision was handed down by the United States Court of Claims.

Scores of veterans must be in the same fix judging from the inquiries on the story. Most of them want to know when they can collect. Well, it seems that the Government is considering an appeal to the Supreme Court. So, no one can collect until Uncle Sam decides the next move. Milton Freeman of the law firm of Arnold, Fortas and Porter handled the Wittner case.

NOTES: If the Senate upholds the 40-per-cent cut in funds for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, it will abolish most of its field offices and collect data through the mails . . . The Veterans Administration will leave its Readjustment Accounts Control Division of its insurance office in New York. That division, which has 700 employes, will be attached to its branch office there.

NCPPC Studies Report on Putting Underground All Wires in District

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday formally approved the proposed $7,900,00 flood control project for the Anacostia River.

At the same session, the commission heard a report that raised the question of putting all wires throughout the District underground. The commission also called on Army Engineers to join with it in planning future use of Dalecarlia reservation.

The commission will meet again today in its offices in the Interior Department building to take up other matters, including a proposed Virginia highway linking Charlottesville with Monticello, and an analysis of the concentration of Federal employes within the District.

Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d., commission chairman, said approval of the Anacostia project was contingent on minor changes when final plans are drawn and when the commission receives the recommendations of the Maryland Planning Commission. The NCPPC, he said, was informally told the Maryland body had given its approval already.

The project is designed to alleviate flood conditions in Bladensburg, Edmonston, Riverdale, Hyattsville, Cottage City, Brentwood and Colmar Manor, and to improve navigation and recreational facilities between Bladensburg and 15th st. se. Of the estimated cost, the Federal Government is to put up $4,500,000.

No action was taken on the report on overhead wire conditions in residential and other outlying sections of the city, Grant said, but he added the commission had asked the report from Electrical Engineer Walter E. Kern "for study."

Grant said the request for the Army to join with it in planning future building and uses of Dalecarlia Reservation was merely an effort to see that some long-range plan might be worked out. He said, as far as the commission knew, no new buildings or uses were being planned.

Lawyers Urge Instruction in Jury Service

A recommendation that jury procedure be included in civics courses of Washington schools was made here yesterday.

The proposal was a part of two laymen's reports approved by a special committee on justice administration from the District section, American Bar Association.

Also approved were recommendations on the proposed new Federal courthouse here to house the U. S. Court of Appeals and District Court. Legislation on the project is on Capitol Hill awaiting action of House and Senate subcommittees on public buildings."

Sees Justice "Frustrated"

Before receiving the educational recommendations, the committee heard District Court Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws declare "the cause of justice is being seriously frustrated by the lack of adequate court facilities."

Bruce Baird, president of the National Savings & Trust Co. and chairman of the laymen's subcommittee on construction of the courthouse, declared "the emergency facing District Court is serious in the extreme."

Connecticut's former Senator John A. Danaher, a member of the special committee, urged all members to talk with friends in Congress to expedite the measure.

From George Washington University's Dean Elmer Louis Kayser came the urge for added citizenship training in secondary and parochial schools. He heads the laymen's subcommittee on relations with jurors.

Proposes Booklet for Jurors

The subcommittee's proposals would teach students fundamentals of jury duty, its functions and obligations. The report deplored lack of opportunity to exercise citizenship as in self-government; pointed to jury duty as one of the few phases open to District residents.

It also proposed publication of a booklet for use of jurors explaining procedure.

Judges, attorneys and laymen attended yesterday's report meeting, held in the Municipal Courts building. Justice Laws represents the bar on the main committee; Ben M. McKelway, editor in chief of The Evening Star, represents laymen.

They were asked to appoint another subcommittee to take up problems of parole and probation and map a tentative rehabilitation proposal.

Work of the committee was indorsed by the new Chief Justice of the United States Court of Appeals Harold M. Stephens.

Plight of Three Sisters in Receiving Home Points Need For More Foster Care as Crowding at Institution Increases

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

AS IF HER HEART WOULD BREAK—Victoria, not quite 2, cries in a crib at Children's Receiving Home. Motherless, the child is in the home with her two sisters because her dad is out of work and cannot take care of them. The Receiving Home now has nine children under 2 years of age. The total child population of the home has averaged 130 during recent weeks

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporters

Victoria isn't quite 2 yet. For the past two weeks she and her two "big" sisters—age 4 and 6—have been living at the District Receiving Home for Children.

They are there because their father is out of work and doesn't have a home to keep them in. He is looking frantically for a job and a house.

Victoria, who still is talking in the strange, uncomprehensible language of babies, doesn't know what to make of all the strange faces she sees—other babies in the cribs next to hers, strange men and women walking around her, feeding her, putting her to bed.

If you smile at her, she will put out her arms to be picked up.

Miss Helaine Todd, senior supervisor of the Public Welfare foster care section, pointed out that if there were enough foster homes to go around, Victoria probably wouldn't be in the District Receiving Home. As a ward of the Welfare Board, she would be in a home somewhere in the Washington area and in a house, not a big, echoing building—and with two or three adults to get used to, rather than two or three dozen.

Then, when her daddy finds a job and a house, she could go home again.

But theer aren't enough foster homes to go around. The number of such homes available has been decreasing, rather than increasing, Miss Todd said. The foster care section is hard pressed to take care of the mounting number of children who are being made wards of the Welfare Board, she said.

For ever since the war ended, and increasingly during the past six months, Miss Todd said, both economic and social factors have heightened the load of dependent children needing care.

The economic factor has been the first indications of unemployment, which already are beginning to break up homes, she said. The social factors are the number of unwed mothers who either want to give their babies in adoption or want them kept in foster homes while they work to support them. A new social factor is the breakup of war marriages, or cases where returning veterans have deserted their families, leaving wives with two or three children, no income, and the urgent need to find work in a hurry, Miss Todd said.

Faced with an increasing backlog of such cases, Miss Todd explained that the foster care section, Child Placement Division of the Public Welfare Department has Solomon-choices to make each week when it reviews the vacancies in foster homes, and the children who need foster care.

All of the children in the Receiving Home are not like Victoria. Some are less fortunate. Some are foundlings. Some are children with behavior problems, for whom a suitable foster home is difficult to find. Some, too, are victims of the housing shortage.

Facilities at the home at Little Falls rd. and MacArthur blvd. nw. have been severely taxed by the flood of children.

According to Dr. William H. Stavsky, superintendent, the institution has had an average population of 130 children of all ages in recent weeks. Currently nine are under two years.

Recently, a father of eight put all his children in the home because he had no house for them. Later he was able to find quarters for six of them. Two are still at the home.

Washington Visit Of 1748 Recalled

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., March 18 (Spl.).—The 200th anniversary of a visit of George Washington to the springs here was marked today at public ceremonies.

Opening ceremonies were held at the Washington marker with a program following in the Warm Springs Grove. Speakers told of the first visit of Washington to the springs on March 18, 1748. Washington, then 16, wrote in his diary, "We this day call'd to see y' fam'd Warm Springs. We camped out in y' field this Night."

Mrs. Anita Buchanan Speer, executive director of the West Virginia George Washington Foundation, has studied records that show that the first President later made frequent visits to the waters here for his health and was sponsor of a move to develop the springs.

Sex Education Is Debated to 'No Decision'

Sex education in District schools, a subject of heated controversy here in past years, gently raised its head in a no-decision debate at a Board of Trade Public Health Committee meeting yesterday.

Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the D. C. Social Hygiene Society and longtime campaigner for a broad program of sex education in the schools, declared:

"We can't shield our children from sex education—they are going to get it every day, whether we give it to them or not, and we might as well teach them the right things."

Firm 'No' From Board

But Everett, guest speaker before the committee at a Burlington Hotel luncheon discussion, was met firmly by the Board of Education's equally longtime campaign against emphasis on sex education.

Said Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education:

"From my own point of view, I get a little tired of hearing people say the schools have to do everything . . . you know there are still homes, and good homes, and good parents. It is the duty of parents to give sex instruction to children, and I don't think schools can take that responsibility from them."

Mrs. Doyle said the schools are trying to approach the problem in two fields—through the science curriculum and physical education instruction.

Col. Birch E. Bayh, head of the District school's department of health and physical education, said adequate sex education—although it is not called that—is already being furnished.

For two hours a week, through the 10th, 11th and 12th grades, he pointed out, there is instruction in such subjects as personal hygiene, community hygiene, first aid, safety, care of the sick (for girls) and "personality development."

Prince Georges, Fairfax Expect Tax Increases

Upper Marlboro Budget Hearing Describes Added Cost of Schools

Prince Georges County will have to boost its current tax rate by at least 25 cents on the $100 evaluation to meet added school needs next year, taxpayers were told yesterday.

More than 75 persons attending a public hearing on the 1948-49 budget at Upper Marlboro were informed an even heavier increase may be necsaitated to finance the over-all county budget, now being prepared by conty officials.

The hearing, conducted by the County Commissioners, was devoted primarily to the public school budget, which has been set tentatively at $3,820,435 for the fiscal year. Of this total, the county will have to furnish $1,902,424, representing an increase of $328,484 over the current year's allocation.

The commissioners, explaining school budget items in detail, said they had pared about $80,000 from the total originally requested by the Board of Education.

The commissioners did not estimate the over-all budget total for the county, since several departments have not yet submitted their proposed 1948-49 totals. After the meeting, however, Chairman William A. Carson said he believed the final figures, including the county's share toward support of schools, would be "at least $3,500,000."

The county is operating this year on a budget of $2,869,000.

Carson said the county would have no way of determining the tax rate for next year until final figures are received on reassessments of real estate and utilities properties and the county's share of State funds provided under the Sherbow Act. Unless anticipated revenues "greatly exceed expectations," he said, the present tax rate of $1.95 may be boosted by as much as 50 cents.

Budget proposals drew few objections from spectators, most of whom came to ask questions about the budget procedure.

The total budget for the year must be completed by March 30 under State law.

$1,800,000 Hike In Expenditures Held Indicating 13% Rise Needed

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

A tentative Fairfax County budget calling for record expenditures of $6,564,679.83 in the fiscal year starting July 1 was released yesterday by the county board of supervisors.

To help finance the $1,818,034.21 increase in spending, the board proposes a 13 per cent increase in tax rates on real estate and personal property.

If this increase, from $3.07 to $3.47 per $100, is voted, it will represent a jump of $1.35 in the rates in four years.

Public hearing on the budget was set for April 20 at 10 a. m. in the county Circuit Court room.

Most of the money will go for schools. The school board has asked for $5,967,851.24 to cover operating expenses, debt retirement and new construction.

This is an increase of $1,654,543.81 over the current budget.

Other notable increases in the budget are:

1. Fire levy, increased from $24,818.65 to $82,850.

R. M. Loughborough, executive secretary of the county, said this was necessary because of a State crackdown on bingo games and other means of raising funds. He said county volunteer fire departments had previously used these means to buy new equipment.

2. Police department, increased from $104,650 to $129,716.33 to provide additional men when the substation near Penn Daw is completed.

(3) Public assistance, increased from $31,533.58 to $54,261 to pay increased costs for hospitalization for indigents.

One of the few items to show a decrease was the pensions paid to Confederate veterans and their widows. The budget allows $2745, a decrease of $375.

Less than one fourth of the proposed expenditures would be paid by the county tax on real estate and personal property. The estimated yield under the higher tax rate would be only $1,577,274.10, an increase of $348,587.72.

Largest single item on the revenue side is $3,929,250 hoped for in loans from the State Literary Fund for school construction. The school board also expects $468,146 in supplemental payments from the State for operating expenses.

Balance of the anticipated revenue will come from State supplemental payments in other departments, miscellaneous fees and accumulated surpluses.

School Bond Issue Seen Facing Delay

A proposed three-million-dollar school bond issue for Montgomery County will not be approved immediately in spite of an emergency plea for action from the Board of Education, it was revealed yesterday.

The County Commisisoners are expected to delay approval until after a series of conferences with the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, according to County Supervisor I. G. McNayr.

The conferences will consider WSSC's 30-million-dollar bonded indebtedness, which county officials have said was lowering the county's credit rating. Under present ararngements, Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties guarantee WSSC's bonds, and Montgomery County itself already has an indebtedness of 16 million dollars.

In a letter to the commissioners yesterday, Mrs. Helen C. Walker, president of the school board, requested approval of the three-million-dollar bond issue "at the earliest possible date. The acquisition of school sites cannot be delayed without seriously jeopardizing the educational system of Montgomery County," she said.

Approval of a five-million-dollar school bond issue was granted last year by the Maryland General Assembly. Two million dollars worth of the bonds were sold last year.

"In view of the present uncertainty regarding the issuance of the remaining three million dollars the Board of Education does not see how it can proceed with its program," Mrs. Walker said. Of the two-million-dollar, approved last year, $1,950,000 already has been spent, she noted, adding, "there is an immediate problem involving the expenditure of an additional $500,000.

The Board of Education letter accompanied a 66-page "interim construction report" in which officials predicted an increased enrollment of 4900 pupils by September. The board warned that six new schools will be needed where housing developments are going up.

He said a field survey indicates the average tractor waster from 50 to 150 gallons of fuel each year.

A 22-year-old motorist yesterday was fined a total of $203 or 153 days in jail on charges growing out of a dash past the Thirteenth Precinct station at 55 miles an hour.

Judson Helms, jr., of 1159 4th st. ne., also was held on $2000 bond for action of the grand jury on charges of unauthorized use of an automobile.

Police testified they pursed Helms about 2 a. m. yesterday after the car he was driving passed on the wrong side of a loading zone at 14th and U sts. nw. They caught him, they said, after one of five passengers in the car turned off the ignition.

The car had been taken from a parking lot at 13th and E sts. nw., police said. It is owned by Harry F. Bossert, 812 S. Ivy st., Arlington, Va.

Fire Loss Put at $3000

An oil burner explosion followed by fire caused about $300 worth of damage to a frame bungalow in Ballard Subdivision, near Clinton, Md., yesterday.

Prince Georges County fire officials said the blast occurred around 10:30 a. m. in the home occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Delbert L. Harris, both of whom were away at the time. The explosion shattered all the windows in the house, but damage otherwise was confined to a utility room housing the oil burner.

County fire officials said the damage was not covered by insurance.

Veteran Protests Tax

William H. Baker took his District income tax problems to the Capitol yesterday and got a promise of quick action from Senator Harry F. Cain (R., Wash.).

Baker, retired chief petty officer in the Navy who lives at 2223 H st. nw., protested because his disability retirement pay is exempt from Federal taxes, but is subjected to the District income tax. The reason given, he said, is that the checks come from the Navy Department and not the Veterans Administration.

Cain said he would confer with District officials and ask for their recommendations. "If disability is tax free under one status it should be under all others," said Cain.

Hearing of an assault charge against Greenbelt Mayor Thomas J. Canning was continued until March 29 in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday, after the defendant's attorney informed the court he would not be able to be present.

Danville Doctor Acquitted of Rape

Danville, Va., March 18 (AP).—Dr. Eugene Willard Arnett, jr., tonight was acquitted by a Corporation Court jury which heard testimony on charges of rape brought by Mrs. Lois Lewis Vaden, 30-year-old mother of three children.

The jury deliberated 2 hours and 40 minutes before returning with its verdict at 6:35 p. m. to end trial of the physician and member of a prominent Danville family. The trial lasted four days.

Indicted on a similar charge and yet to be tried is Ollie C. Pickeral.

Charlottesville May Receive Natural Gas

Charlottesville, Va., March 18 (Spl.).—Atlantic Seaboard Corp. representatives today told the city council that Charlottesville will receive natural gas if the company constructs a pipeline between Cobbs, W. Va., and Rockville, Md.

City Manager Seth Burnley said company officials indicated the line might be constructed in 1949, if authority is received from the Federal Power Commission. It would relieve the Virginia Gas Transmission Co.'s line running through Albemarle County to serve the District of Columbia and intermediate points.

No written statement has been received from gas company officials, according to Mayor Roscoe B. Adams. The city has been making efforts for several years to tap natural gas lines in the area to replace the present supply of artificial gas.

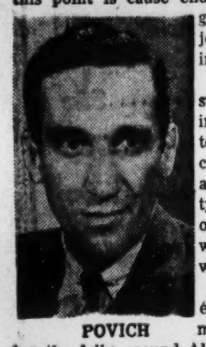
Nats Hit Three Homers But Lose to Phils, 12 to 10

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

CLEARWATER, FLA., March 18.—The most celebrated member of this winter colony where the Phillies do their training seems to be a young man named Curt Simmons. His career to this point is cause enough for young America to forget about growing up to be locomotive engineers or jet pilots, and rush to the nearest store and invest in a pitcher's toe plate.



POVICH

Young Mr. Simmons, when he was 18 last summer, grabbed his high school diploma in one hand and with the other he was able to reach for a $58,000 bonus for signing a contract with the Phillies. He thereby set a new indoor and outdoor record for that type of salesmanship, and reduced to second place Dick Wakefield, the college boy who was given merely $52,000 for signing with the Detroit Tigers a few years back.

As in the case of Wakefield, almost every major league club was bidding for Simmons, a left-handed pitcher who was wowing the folks around Allentown, Pa., area with his strikeout performances for the Egypt (Pa.) High School team. Big league scouts were beating a track to his parents' home, offering $40,000 and $50,000 for a legal signature on their contracts, when the Phillies stepped in and took him away.

The Red Sox and Tigers were particularly eager to sign Simmons, but the Phillies were in on the ground floor, it seems. The Phillies' agent, Cy Morgan, merely smirked as other scouts haunted the lad's home.

THE PHILS DID it very smoothly. One of the things they did was to toss a chicken dinner for the whole town, pop. 700, and pick up the check. Their scout's wife was an old friend of young Simmons' mother, and that also helped. And then the Phillies poured it on thickly. Brought their whole ball club up to little Egypt, and played a game with the town team to show how much the Phillies loved all the people up around that way.

They couldn't sign him before he graduated on account of Commissioner Chandler's mustn't touch rule with respect to high school boys, and they didn't grab him until a couple of weeks later, in fact. Meanwhile, young Simmons was pitching for the town team, and he pitched against the Phillies, moreover, and struck out nine of 'em, to gain a 4-4 tie. That performance further impressed the Phillies, and they liked the lad's whole approach to the situation. He didn't have to pitch against the Phils, and if perchance they knocked the spots off him, his value would go down, but he preferred to take that chance. The Phillies greedily counted off the $58,000 and signed him after the game, and sent him to their Wilmington farm club for the rest of the season.

AT WILMINGTON, young Simmons was wonderful. Joining the team in later June, he won 13 games and lost only five. His strikeout record was downright amazing. Pitching the equivalent of 16 full games he fanned an average of 12 hitters a game. The Phils brought him up at the end of the season, willing to gamble that he needed no more experience in the minors.

He pitched one game for the Phils last year, the final game at Shibe Park against the Giants. That was the day Johnny Mize was trying to beat out Ralph Kiner of Pittsburgh for the home run championship, and the Giants put big Mize at the lead-off spot in the batting order to give him a chance at more turns at bat. In five times up, Mize didn't get a ball out of the infield against Simmons, made only one hit.

Simmons beat the Giants, 3 to 1, that day, allowing only five hits. He struck out 10 of 'em. Overnight he became something of a fabulous rookie, the hottest pitching article since Bob Feller He isn't as big as Feller, but he has better control than Feller had at the outset. Manager Ben Chapman was saying today "I roomed with Lefty Gomez when he broke in. Simmons is a better pitcher than Gomez was in those days."

CHAPMAN IS happy about the whole idea of having Simmons around. Last year he had only two pitchers of any worth—Dutch Leonard and Schoolboy Rowe, who won 30 games between them. The Phils finished last. One other reason was their shortstop and third base problems. By midseason, when the sun had hardened the diamonds and ground balls skittered, Lamar Newsome and Jim Tabor couldn't get off a dime. The Phils have come up now with Eddie Miller to play shortstop and Bert Haas to play third base.

Chapman, the old firebrand, doesn't bolt out of the dugout to quarrel with the umpires, like he used to do. "You can't win," he said. "In the 18 years I've been playing the game, I never saw an umpire reverse a decision. I don't even bother to go out to the field to take out a pitcher any more. I send my coach, Benny Bengough, out there to tell him he's through."

He learned his lesson Chapman said, one day when he went to the mound to take a pitcher out and was talked into letting the guy stay in to face one more batter. On the next pitch, a home run beat us. Now I take no chances. I send Bengough out there; he points at me and tells the pitcher 'he says you're all through, so don't argue with me.'"

Caps Hold 34-32 Lead At Halftime

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Baltimore, March 18. — The Washington Capitols held a 34-32 halftime lead over the Baltimore Bullets here tonight in a crucial Basket Ball Association of America game.

The season's finale between the two bitter rivals attracted a standing room only crowd of 4400 customers to the Baltimore Coliseum.

Trailing the Bullets by one game, the Caps must win tonight's battle to stay alive in the torrid race for a playoff berth.

Washington owned a 17-11 first quarter advantage and even led by an eight point margin at one stage of the second quarter. The Bullets, however, drew up to a 31-31 tie 15 seconds before the first half ended. At this point, Johnny Norlander scored the basket which gave the Caps its two-point recess margin.

Bob Feerick was Washington's leading scorer in the first half with five field goals and four fouls for 14 points.

Caps Take Early Lead

The Caps got the opening tapoff and wheeled down court to take a 2-0 lead when Freddie Scolari scored with a one-hander from sdecourt. Bones McKinney followed with a jump shot and it was 4-0 Washington before the game was 30 seconds old.

Baltimore, however, quickly tied it up on baskets by Paul Hoffman and Grady Lewis. It remained touch and go until the 6:25 mark, when Irv Torgoff stole the ball from Lewis and dribbled in for a layup to put Washington 4 points in front once again.

This time, however, the Caps ddn't allow the Bullets to tie it, but instead the Washingtonians pulled away and had a 17-11 lead at the end of the quarter.

Bullets Come to Life

The opening two minutes of the second period saw a battle between Feerick and Kleggie Hermsen. Feerick swished in two one-handers and a pair of free throws while Hermsen hooked in two goals and it was 23-15, Washington, at the 5-minute mark.

The Bullets, jittery and playing sloppily, suddenly came to life and pulled up to within two points of the Caps. Dick Schultz led the rally with a pair of long set shots, but Feerick halted that rally with with his seventh point of the period to restore Washington's four-point margin.

McKinney hooked in a dazzling one-hander to give the Caps a six-point bulge, 28-22, but the Bullets bounced right back with another spurt and tied it when Lewis scored on a tap in. It remained that way for a split second only, however, just lnog enough for Norlander to race down court and connect to give Washington its slim 34-32 half time margin.

Caps Trail, 50-48

Baltimore, March 18. — The Bullets held a 50-48 lead over the Caps, going into the final quarter.

Dorish worked the last four innings for Boston, and held the Yanks hitless to get credit for he win. His double in the sixth was the longest hit of the game. Dom DiMaggio drove in two Boston runs with a single.

By Ted Smits

New York, March 18 (AP).—Kentucky's Wildcats smothered Columbia's Ivy League champions, 76-53, tonight in the first semifinal game of the National Collegiate Athletic Association Eastern play-offs.

A capacity Madison Square Garden crowd of nearly 18,500 was on hand for the double-header attraction which also featured a game between Holy Cross' defending NCAA titleholders and Michigan, the Big Nine champion.

The opening contest was a hard-driving affair a bit on the rough side. The scoring stars of both teams went out in the second half on personal fouls.

"Wah Wah" Jones, Kentucky's point-making ace, was ejected about midway the last half after ringing in 21 points. Walter Budko, who set a new individual scoring record at Columbia this year went out shortly afterwards, after tallying 17.

Columbia held its own for the first eight minutes before Kentucky, taking advantrge of its superior height and experience, started pulling away steadily.

The Wildcats, Southeastern Conference champions, led at the half, 38 to 25.

Mavity Quits Fairfax High Athletic Post

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Bob Mavity, No. 1 sports figure in Fairfax County, yesterday announced his resignation as athletic director of Fairfax High School.

Mavity claimed to give a reason for his resignation, but added that "as soon as possible, I will apply for a job in the Washington public high schools."

His resignation becomes effective in June. No successor has been named.

Mavity's resignation is the third to be announced by Washington area scholastic coaches in two days. Wednesday, Athletic Director Charlie Guy of Bullis Prep and Football Coach Evans (Bus) Male of Episcopal quit to join the University of Virginia's freshman coaching staff.

The 34-year-old Mavity became athletic director at Fairfax High, smallest Class A Conference school in Virginia, in 1911. Since then, he coached the football teams to 28 victories against 19 losses and five ties. He also coached baseball and basketball three years, and track five years.

He kept himself busy in other activities, serving at various times as:

1. Sports editor of the Providence Journal, Fairfax County weekly newspaper.

2. Operator of a sporting goods store in Falls Church.

3. One of the founders last year of the Northern Virginia Umpires Association, and basketball, baseball and football official for high school and college games.

4. Originator of the summer high school league which last year included Fairfax, Washington-Lee of Arlington, George Washington of Alexandria and Mount Vernon.

5. Orginator of a successful $11,000 county drive to build a closed-in stadium and lighting system for Fairfax High.

6. One of the organizers of the Fairfax County Recreation Association.

Robertson Parks One, Kozar Two

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Clearwater, Fla., March 18.—The Nats ran second to the Phillies in the heavy traffic on the baselines today, 12 to 10, after taking a five-run lead in the early innings. Five homeruns sailed out of the park, three of them by the Nats.

The Nats were completely unawed by the presence of Curt Simmons, the Phils' prize rookie pitcher, and walloped him for four runs in the first three innings, but young Simmons was invincible compared to some of the Wasshington pitching. The Phils belted three of the Nats' rookies, Scott Cary, Vernon Curtis and Joe Murray, for 16 hits, some of them singles.

Young Al Kozer was the prize performer for the Nats. He dissipated some of the rising doubt of his hitting ability by swatting a home run off Simmons in the first inning, and he touched up Rookie Robin Roberts for a two-run homer in the fourth. Both blows were well-smitten over the right field wall.

Clark Has Three Errors

Cary turned over a 4-3 lead to Curtis in the fourth inning, but it was futile. Starting with the second inning, the Phils scored at least one run in each of six consecutive innings, and eventually won the game on a run forced in by Murray in the sixth.

The Nats also kicked in with three errors—all by the same guy, and all in the same inning. Rookie Shortstop Jim Clark was the malefactor. He booted two ground balls and made one wild throw in the fourth when the Phils came up with three runs on one hit.

The Nats threatened to win it in a breeze in the fourth when they battered young Roberts for five hits and four runs to take an 8-3 lead. Sullivan doubled, and Kozar whacked his second homer for two runs. A bit later McBride doubled, and Sherry Robertson banged a loud homer over the same right field wall.

Roberts, Rowe Step Them

In the fifth, Dean Stafford smacked a two-bagger that figured in two more runs, but that's all the Nats ever did get. They were held to two hits in the last four innings by Roberts and Schoolboy Rowe.

The Phils meanwhile were doing very well. Al Flair got 'em a run

Anadarko, Okla., March 18 (AP).—Note to overweight fighters.

Amateur Fleaweight Harry Kauley has an easy solution to the knotty problem of whacking off excess blubber.

While other entrants in the Oglahoma AAU boxing tournament donner sweat suits and pounded the turf to get down to fighting weight, he climbed aboard an Army jeep and scooted over the countryside, hitting every bump he could find.

Four pounds quickly melted from Kauley's frame and he happily weighed in at 95.

Brothers said: "It is regrettable that the All-America Conference cannot be as ethical in dealing with colleges and universities as the National (Professional) League has been."

Two Arrows Drawn in Sand Latest Clue in Snider Hunt

EVERGLADES, Fla., March 18 (AP).—Two arrows drawn in the sand on a beach were being tracked down today by searchers for Jockey Al Snider and two companions who have been missing from a fishing trip for 13 days.

The search for Snider, C. H. (Tobe) Trotter, horse trainer, Oon Frazier, Canadian businessman, will end officially Sunday unless some more definite clues are found.

The arrows found today pointed toward Whitewater Bay. They were located on Cape Sable 20 miles north of the spot where the trio's fishing boat was last seen March 5.

Fishermen who know the Everglades wilderness and the waters around the tip of Florida are divided on whether the three men have survived. Some say they could be lost for weeks in the dense wilderness of Mangrove Swamps; others say the boat could have overturned a half dozen times at sea.

A Coast Guard plane with Lieut. Comdr. Richard Baxter, head of the Miami airsea rescue unit aboard, developed engine trouble at sea today and was forced to land about 1 mile off the Everglades landing strip. A cutter will tow the plane to Key West for repairs. Baxter was flown back to Miami.

The trio's boat was found near here Saturday, beached on a small key. It was empty with the exception of the oarlocks in place and a rope tied around the bow.

Missing were three life saving cushions, an outboard motor and other equipment.

'I'm Easy to Get'

Old Bobo's Willing to Slave With Phils for $10,000 Bonus

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 18 (AP).—Phillies' Manager Ben Chapman said today he was ready to pitch "Tom Thumb" when up popped Louis Bobo Newsom with an application for a job—and a $10,000 bonus.

The portly Bobo varies somewhat from "Tom Thumb" specifications. And he still holds much more than a small opinion of his talents and dollar value.

Said Bobo:

"You need me and I'm easy to get. I'll take $10,000 to sign and we'll come to terms on the contract amount."

Bobo watched Chapman wince as four more of his throwers were pounded. And before Ben recovered, Bobo returned to the attack.

"Don't gasp when I talk money like that," he said. "You'd give some sandlot kid 10 grand to sign. Whats' wrong with a sure-fire winning old workhorse like me getting it?"

Chapman was speechles for one of the few times in his baseball life. And Bobo, never one to waste a moment of speaking time hastened to report:

"I'm in better shape than I've ever been at this time in the year."

Patting his bulging waistline, Newsom said he spurned a $20,000 New York Yankee contract because he had been voted only a three-quarter World Series share. The fast talking pitcher is a free agent.

Finally recovered, Chapman had his say:

"I'd pitch Tom Thumb if he could win for us, but he'd have to prove it.

"Thats' the way I feel about Bobo. If he can win we'll pay him. But we're not going to sign him to a contract and have him sit on the bench.

Fox Hoax:

Haight Rides To Hounds—With Hound

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

SMILE, DARN YOU, but it's a fact—I'm a fox hunter. At least, I'm an accepted member of the Redland Hunt and eligible to ride to the hounds with those beautiful women and handsome men.

Haight

On the night my membership was approved, I'm told that seven horses went lame half of the Redland hounds developed distemper and the foxes—Local No. 534, Olney (Md.) Den, Amalgamated They-Can't Catch-We-All of America—held a meeting and voted me the hunter they would like most to be alone with in a deep woods.

I only hunted once, but I'll get around to that later.

Someone phoned and wanted to know fox hunting dates hereabouts. So I phoned Friend Thomas T. Mott, Redland's Master of Fox Hounds, and his answer was so interesting, and I needed a column so badly that I'm passing it along with a few additions and Haightisms.

The regular season is from November 15 to March 15 with most hunts taking to the field three times weekly. However, when bad weather limits the sport in the winter months, some "bye" hunts are called by the master after the closing date.

Particularly interesting was Brother Mott's explanation of cub hunting, starting in mid-September. This is an education period for all concerned—young foxes, green horses, puppy hounds and novice riders.

CUBS BORN the previous spring seldom venture far away from their dens and their mothers. Once chased, it seems, these cubs, who peril their whole family when denned, go for themselves, making homes of their own.

In hunting them, the puppies of the year, along with aging, slow dogs who are beyond use in the packs, are used.

Chances of a cub actually being killed are small. Nature aids him in scampering back to his den, but the pups must learn their job. They trip over brush, bump into trees and roll into gullies. The older dogs teach them the tricks. When the going gets too tough for the young fox, the veteran hounds are called off.

The period of cub hunting gives members a chance to tryout prospective hunting horses, become acquainted with the peculiarities of the country and allows hunt officials to check on fences, etc. This also is a time inexperienced riders absorb training under hunting conditions.

But come November and the rehearsals are over. All hands—riders, horses, hounds and foxes—have a job to do. It's the real thing—and for keeps.

Fox hunting is a sport imported to America from England where it originated about the fourteenth century. The hounds, horses and even the foxes were brought over from Britain—and come to think of it most of the present hunters are of English decent.

English lords brought in their hounds an horses before the Revolution and hunted the native gray fox. However, his coloring blended with the countryside and so the British sent for several pairs of red foxes. They stayed to increase the breed.

I PROMISED to write about the time I went hunting.

Well, I drove out to the starting point and, after getting several dirty looks from the horse I was supposed to ride, I decided that spectator hunting was for me.

Soon riders mounted and hounds yelped. A whip cracked and they were off and running—horses and riders disappearing over the hill in a sea of dogs.

I sat on the running-board of my car. The farm yard was deserted and I a lonely feeling came overme.

Around the corner of the barn came a hound. He shuffled up to me, tail wagging vigorously, and licked the back of my hand.

"Well, you old bum," I said. "You should be hunting."

I had been told if I went down the road a bit and waited, I might see part of the chase. When I climbed into the car, the hound jumped up on the seat beside me.

"Okay," I said. "I'm going hunting in my car, so I'll ride you down there and put you back in the pack."

Before we reached the main road, he was sound asleep.

I parked beside a field and it wasn't long before the pack, followed by the riders, appeared hot on the trail of a fox. I opened the car door, shook the dog into wakefulness but, when I attempted to push him out, he growled.

I got the idea—this hound simply didn't like to hunt.

I returned to the farm yard. Soon tired hunters and panting hounds returned. This time, when I opened the car door, my dog slipped out and joined the pack.

On the way to the kennel, a hound eyed me with a look that seemed to say, "If you know me, say nothing. See you at the next hunt."

And darned if he wasn't panting.

Lawrence, Johnson Top 21-Bout Card

With a lineup of 21 star bouts, the District AAU tourney will hold its semifinal round of boxing at Turner's Arena tonight, beginning at 8:15 o'clock.

Five amateur champions will see action, headed by St. Mary's Claude Lawrence, who boxes Henry Johnson of the Police Boys Club No. 2, in the 126-pound senior class.

Lawrence's clubmate, Dick Rawlett, 1947 novice flyweight champion and named the outstanding boy in the tournament, engages Pat Thomas of Apollo. The latter upset Champion Eddie Funk last Tuesday.

Among the middleweights, Ralph Meador of Barney, former novice titleholder, will box Holly Mims of the Howard A. C.

In another middleweight scrap, Golden Gloves novice champion, Joe Williams, of Police Club 2, meets Meador's clubmate, Eddie Kennett.

The heavyweight class bouts will feature Harold McIlwain of the 12th Street Y, who meets Joe Staley of the United States Navy. McIlwain was Golden Gloves novice champion.

GW's Zahn Brings Court Spirit to Diamond

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

After a successful basketball season, Coach Otts Zahn currently is at work trying to inject the same winning spirit into the George Washington U. baseball team.

With the break in the weather, Zahn has been able to hold outdoor workouts daily at 23d st. and Constitution ave. for 40-odd candidates. The Colonials, who won only four of 14 last season, open a 19-game schedule against Harvard March 31.

This is Zahn's first year as a varsity baseball coach, although he handled the freshman team one season before the war. A former GW infielder and a player on many semipro teams in this area, Zahn is taking over for Vince DiAngelis who was moved up to the school's business office.

Eight lettermen are back and the new coach received a windfall of talent out of the unsettled football situation at GW. While the school shops around for a grid mentor, more than a dozen football players who would have been taking part in spring practice are trying out for the baseball squad.

In fact six of them are filling eight berths on the tentative first team. Blocking Back Joe Wapinsky has been working behind the bat and three of the infielders played for Skip Stahley last season. They include Hank Bartelloni, on first, Tony Caruso, on second and Joe Famulatte at third.

Outfielders Art Kennedy and Don Druckenmiller round out the half-dozen footballers. Druckenmiller, catcher who batted over .300 last season, has been switched to right field because of a serious football injury. Druckenmiller, varsity center, suffered a concussion in the University of Miami game that ended his football career.

Two members of Zahn's basketball squad that finished second in the Southern Conference fill the other spots. Chet Pietras is playing short and Bunny Citrenbaum, centerfield. A third, Maynard Haithcock, is trying for an infield position.

Pitching was a weak department last year and Zahn said it's still too early to know if there's going to be any improvement. Those looking best at the moment are Curley Kuldell, Lefty Pete King, Gen Gould, an all-high flinger at Western, and Jimmy Smithson, former Anacostia lefthander.

Griffith Helps Masonic Program

Clark C. Griffith, president of the Washington Nats, yesterday was appointed baseball adviser to Rover Q. Mills, general chairman of the "Masonic Night of Thrills," which will be presented June 1 at Griffith Stadium.

Mills, worshipful master of King Solomon Lodge, No. 31, F. A. A. M., has asked Griffith, a member of Harmony Lodge, No. 17, F. A. A. M., to assist him with the ball game which precedes the regular program. Griffith again has contributed the use of the stadium. All of the proceeds go to the Masonic and Eastern Star home.

Thirty Listed For Handicap Opening Day

Bowie, Md., March 18—Thirty nominations have been made for the $10,000 added Rowe Memorial Handicap, six-furlong, opening-day feature of the 12-day Bowie session starting March 29, it was announced last night.

Two stake winners from last fall's Bowie meeting are in line, namely, Shamrock Stable's Air Patrol, winner of the W. P. Burch Memorial, and Joe Tucci's Incline, who defeated Gallorette, Double Jay and others in the Bryan and O'Hara Handicap.

Air Patrol, after a winter of leisure in Florida, is reported training well while the Washington-owned Incline returns to Eastern racing after successful campaigning on the palm tree circuit.

Although Trainer L. Ogle is reported to have said Saggy, Maryland's top Kentucky Derby hope, would be rested until Havre de Grace, the Sagners of Baltimore who own the colt, may want to see him against older horses in the Rowe. At least, he's an eligible.

Further luster is added to the Rowe by the fact that winter campaigners from all sections will be represented. An international flavor has been inserted by the presence of Basileus II and Flambeur, two expensive French importations owned by Isadore Bieber and trained by Hirsch Jacobs.

H. G. Bedwell's Last Endeavor and Fantom Venture lend a far west touch, having arrived from Santa Anita.

Jap Minister Lives On Black Market Rice

Tokyo, March 18 (AP).—Japan's minister of agriculture got caught in one of Tokyo's popular "man in the street" broadcasts today and was asked by a bystander how he managed to live, the food situation being what it is.

"On black market rice," replied the minister, Kazuo Nagae, who directs the rice-collection program and has much to do with rationing.

The crowd roared approval as someone shouted, "Good! At least you're honest!"

"Four Roses, please!"

This is what to say
to get a matchless highball
every time!

St. Marys Man Files Appeal in Gaming Case

Annapolis, Md., March 18 (AP).—The only man convicted of 23 St. Marys County residents indicted last year on gambling charges asked the Court of Appeals to exonerate him today.

John King, 50, was fined $300 in September for allowing the use of slot machines in the bus terminal he managed near the Patuxent River naval station.

His attorneys attacked the conviction, charging the juries that indicted King and found him guilty were improperly selected.

They leveled the accusations at Chief Judge William M. Loker of the Seventh Judicial Circuit. In drawing the names of prospective jurors, they contended, he did not always use the county poll books or tax list.

The same charge evoked an angry outburst from Judge Loker last September before the trials began.

King was one of three defendants tried at Leonardtown. The first was acquitted, and a jury could reach no verdict on the other.

In an unprecedented move, the then State's Attorney C. Henry Camalier later won a motion to have the remaining cases tried elsewhere. The judges decided upon Montgomery County.

Camalier subsequently died, and the cases have not yet been prosecuted.

The devices were legalized in a county referendum last December.

Va. Capitol Gets Fragments From Ruined Building

Richmond, Va., March 18 (AP).—Fragments of stone and lead from the English House of Commons were presented today to Governor Tuck in a simple ceremony sponsored by the American and British Commonwealth Association.

Inclosed in a mahogany case the reminders of England were the gift of Charles Sumner Bird, of Massachusetts, and Eric Gordon Underwood, British lecturer and author. Mrs. Mervyn Herbert, sister of Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt and daughter of the late Lieut. Gov. Joseph Willard, presented the case to the Governor.

The stones were recovered from the debris of the House of Commons after its destruction by incendiary bombs May 10, 1941. Similar mementoes are being presented under the association's sponsorship to capitols of all the States.

Groans on Tapped Phone Line Bring Stricken Man Aid

Hagerstown, Md., March 18 (AP). A telephone lineman who heard groans on a line he had tapped brought swift aid to a man stricken with a heart attack.

Repairman C. C. Fowler said he heard "peculiar noises" while testing telephone company lines.

He heard the operator repeating "Number, please," with no reply except groans.

Fowler called the company test board, got the address of the mystery caller, which turned out to be nearby.

The lineman went to the address, found Olin A. Gilbert prostrate on the floor, telephone in hand, unable to speak. Fowler put in an emergency call for a doctor, who said Gilbert had suffered a heart attack.

Richard Morford's Trial Recessed Until Monday

The contempt trial of Richard Morford, executive secretary of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship yesterday was recessed until Monday after a day spent in wrangling over constitutional questions.

The jury was excluded most of the session as opposing counsel argued the legality of methods used by the House Committee on Un-American Activities in its investigation of the council. Morford is accused of refusal to turn over certain records to the committee.

Moscow, March 18 (AP).—A Communist youth publication said today the Soviet government is speeding construction of the 2260-mile South Siberian Railway.

It will provide an alternate route for the movement of coal from the Kuznetsk Basin to the Urals and European Russia and for iron ore and other products from the Urals.

It will halve the burden of the Trans-Siberian Railway, Komsomol Pravda said and is to be finished by 1950.

Contributions of $14,491 have been received toward a goal of $19,900, according to Charles M. Jones, fund chairman. ERP Urged By Maryland Organizations

Sixty representatives of Maryland organizations yesterday told their Congressmen they wanted passage of the European Recovery Plan right now, and no fooling.

"To us 'soon as possible' means now," said their spokesmen, Mrs. John B. Ramsay, jr., of the Baltimore League of Women Voters. "The citizens of Maryland are angry about delays. They don't want a Third World War because of delays."

The five Congressmen listened patiently. Then each pledged support for quick passage. They were Edward T. Miller (R.), Hugh A. Meade (D.), Edward A. Garmatz (D.), George H. Fallon (D.), and Lansdale G. Sasscer (D.). Only Representative J. Glenn Beall (R.) was absent.

Among the organizations represented from nearby Anne Arundel, Howard, Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties were the League of Women Voters, and Federation of Women's Clubs.

Two Women May Join Fredericksburg Council

Fredericksburg, Va., March 18 (Spl.)—The Fredericksburg city council will have its first two women members this year if the local ladies have their way.

Citing laxity of public health laws and educational needs as reasons for feminine representation, a group of civic leaders recently determine to place the women on the ballot. A list of 18 possible candidates has been drawn up, and the two choices will be made at a mass meeting Monday.

If the women are elected they won't have to worry about baby sitters doring the monthly council meetings. Political backers have pledged that they will take over the responsibility.

Parsons Newman, attorney to the school board, said the board will ask for dissolution of the injunction in order to continue action against Hardy.

Youngsters Bake Easter Cookies

By Lucia Brown

MOST youngsters have a yen for cookies and love to hang around the kitchen while they're being made. When they can also have a hand in the making and invite their friends in to help too, eat cookies, and take some home later—well, it all adds up to a cookie party and lots of fun.

Just such a party was given one afternoon this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Silcox in Alexandria. Gordon, Marjorie, and Franklin Silcox, Tony and Susan Dold, and Carol Downin gathered to make Easter cookies, the tantalizing fragrance of baking goodies filled the air, and bowls of varicolored frosting, coconut, and jelly beans dotted the big dining room table.

This wasn't the first time Mrs. Silcox has entertained with a cookie party for her youngsters. The others have all been at Christmas time, however. The last one was such a success that there was popular demand for a return engagement at Easter. This time, chicken, bunny, Easter egg and basket cutters were used by the busy crew instead of stars and Christmas trees.

GUEST list for the party was limited to six because that's about as many as it's practical to have at a cooking bee of this kind, Mrs. Silcox believes. If there are more, they only get in each others way.

Mrs. Silcox started preparations for the party the night before by mixing up a big batch of sugar cookies. She put the dough away in the refrigerator so it would be nice and firm for rolling next day. Before the young guests arrive the next afternoon, she made a sizeable bowlful of icing, using confectioner's sugar and cream. She also baked and iced a few cookies to give the youngsters ideas when they started decorating their own.

First item on the party program was a good hand washing, to guard against having any dark gray cookies in the lot! After a soap-and-water session, the children lined up for hand inspection, then proceeded to the business of rolling and cutting out the dough.

"It's a good idea to have an adult roll out the first batch, at least, to show them how thick to make it," says Mrs. Silcox. "Then the children can take turns cutting out the cookies. They usually need to be shown how close together to cut them, how to take them up and put them in the pans."

ONCE the cookies were in the oven the guests repaired to the dining room—except for the two oldest, who stayed to watch the cookies and cut out some more. The big dining table gave plenty of space for the job of frosting. Each child was given a small bowl of white icing, which he proceeded to color for use in "painting," as one of the boys called it.

Vegetable coloring in pastel shades was used for the tinting. Each youngster picked out his own color and got a great kick out of watching dark drops fall on white icing, then mixing them in until just the right color was obtained. Beside each bowl was a knife for use in spreading icing, and in the center of the table were the cookies Mrs. Silcox had made the night before. The children rotated from bowl to bowl so that each could have a turn at the different colored icings.

Decorating the cookies, after they had received their initial coating of yellow, pink, green, white or lavender icing, was the most fun of all. Mrs. Silcox made funnels of several folds of wax paper, fastened together with a pin. They were dropped in the top of milk bottles to hold them steady while the children filled them with colored icing. The icing was made up quite stiff for the decorating job and when it softened in the tube from being held by small, warm hands, it was put back in the refrigerator to harden.

EASTER egg cookies with their names written on them were one of the fascinating varieties turned out by the youngsters. The name and a zig-zag edging were done in a color that contrasted with the background icing.

Even more intriguing was a cookie that looked like a small nest of green grass with several colored eggs in the middle. The nest was made with green-tinted coconut arranged on the icing while it was still soft. (The coconut was tinted by rolling it about with a few drops of green vegetable coloring.) Jelly beans were halved and pressed in the center of the nest to simulate Easter eggs.

Eyes and other decorative touches were added to the bunny, chicken and basket, cookies with the icing tube.

After all the cookies were done, milk and fruit juices were served along with some of them as refreshments. The rest—especially the most fancy productions—were packed in boxes for taking home.

"The guests never hang around after the party's over," laughed Mrs. Silcox. "They're too eager to get home and show off their handiwork."

Ask Anne

Your Question On Homemaking

We are planning a mother-daughter banquet for the first part of May in the church gym and are expecting about 50 mothers and their daughters of all ages, from infants up. Will you please suggest ideas concerning the meal, decorations, entertainment, favors and anything else that might add to a Mother's Day affair? R. R. H.

A May day flower theme for your banquet could be worked out attractively. Arrange small May poles in the center of each table with streamers of many pastel colors running to each place. Or possibly a large May pole could be erected in the center of the room with colored streamers running to the corners of the room to form a canopy. On the tables use tiny May baskets for nut cups. Decorate the tables and room with flowers. The favors could be nosegays or wrist bouquets for each guest. These can be easily made by the committee from flowers which will be available then. Use lightweight wire to fasten the flowers to a paper lace doily as a background and tie with a bow of ribbon. To make a quick bow, arrange the ribbon in loops and twist the fine wire in such a way as to hold it together in the middle. This wire holding the bow can be easily attached to the wired flowers. Be sure to turn all sharp ends so they will not catch.

Use the flower idea wherever possible in planning the menu. For instance, a sectioned grapefruit and orange salad can be arranged as a flower.

For entertainment you could provide each guest with a slip of paper upon which is written "mother," vertically. At a given signal each guest is to fill in the slip with a flower which begins with each letter in mother. Or, the guests could work in mother-daughter teams. Give a small prize for the first person or couple finished. Another activity would be to sing songs with flowers in the title. Number the tables, and let those at table number one start the singing. They choose a song with a flower in the title and

Girl Is All Set to Marry Charming Salesman She Met Two Months Ago, When He Brings News That He's Tied to His Wife, Expects a Child

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 19 and until two months ago I was engaged to be married to a young man I have known for years. Then I met another young man who changed all my plans.

He came here as a salesman newly employed by the firm where I work. He is 23 and a wonderful person. We saw a lot of each other and finally I broke my engagement and became his girl.

We made wonderful plans for our future and then he told me that he had been married but was divorced. I accepted his explanation and continued to love him as much as ever. As time went on, we agreed at his suggestion that after we married we would make a fresh start in some other town where no one knew us.

She Had Thought He Was Divorced

PURSUANT to this plan, he acquired a job in a much bigger town about 90 miles from here, and we were all set to take the final step when one day he came to tell me that his divorce hadn't gone through. He said he got this information from his lawyer, when he went to get a copy of the final decree.

Naturally I was very shocked, as I had believed he was free to marry. Had I known the truth, I never would have gone with him. Now I have promised to wait for him until he has secured a divorce, because I do love him very much; but there are to be no more dates until he has a right to see me.

Lastly, there is the other difficulty. His wife is expecting a child and he feels very badly about that. My parents are opposed to him because of his trouble, but I look at his trouble simply as a big mistake,—and everybody makes mistakes. Would I be throwing my life away if I wait for him? I am very willing to take the chance.

P. S.

Man Is Weak, Disorganized

DEAR P. S.: This young man has nothing to offer by way of character; hence nothing of security either; therefore nothing worth waiting for.

He is basically weak, disorganized, dishonest and irresponsible, but he has a natural affinity for salesmanship in his disarming approach and persuasive tongue, which he has employed unscrupulously in winning your heart, without knowing from one day to the next what he ha: in mind, to start, thus without care for the net results to your personality if and when his lies caught up or his interest veered to someone else.

As for his latest revelation that the purported divorce has not gone through, I doubt that divorce action was ever started, or even discussed with his wife until recently.

In all probability he eased out on her with plausible excuse of finding better-paid work in another town, after hearing a child was due,—hence was in tricky flight from a trusting spouse, also from fear of having support-papers served on him after his desertion became apparent, at the time his path crossed yours.

He Can't Stand Responsibility

IN BRIEF, I surmise that divorce hadn't figured in his thoughts (except as "long arm of the law" to be outwitted) until he arrived in town, took a fancy to you and then discovered to his chagrin that he couldn't make headway without talking marriage, inasmuch as you were already engaged.

Whereupon he proceeded to pose as eligible and soon found himself snarled up in a serious infatuation (welcome opiate to his weakling worries about his runaway performance), and with a "living lie" in relation to you to be ironed out, in a face-saving way if possible, to keep your par-

Group Asks U. S. Action on Palestine

The Women's Action Committee for Lasting Peace yesterday urged the United States Government to recognize the provisional government of the Jewish section of Palestine to be effective as of April 1, and to modify the arms embargo "so as to permit the immediate purchase by the Jewish agency of military equipment and the shipment of this equipment in the custody of representatives of the United Nations to Palestine."

Action on the Palestine question came in the form of a resolution adopted at a special meeting of the policy board of WACLP Monday and was announced yesterday by Mrs. Norman deR. Whitehouse, national president.

The motion also called upon the United States to take the leadership immediately in putting in motion United Nations' machinery to protect the inhabitants of Palestine from outside pressure and threats of force. At the same time, it was emphasized that every effort still should be made to persuade all parties concerned to agree on a method of carrying out the General Assembly's recommendation concerning Palestine.

As a basis for further action, the United States is asked too "seek a prompt decision by the Security Council as to whether the situation constitutes a threat to international peace and security," and to urge the Security Council to invoke all of the nonmilitary sanctions provided in Article 41 of the United Nations Charter, and if this action is inadequate, "then to provide whatever military action is necessary to restore and maintain international peace and security."

Furthermore, the committee's resolution calls upon the United States to "take the initiative in developing a practical plan now for armed forces to ensure the

Women Voters Hear Address on 'Voice of America'

We can be sure the State Department's "Voice of America" program is effective merely by examining counter propaganda action taken by Moscow-controlled radio and press. So said Jesse MacKnight, special assistant to the Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs, in his address to the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters yesterday.

The "Voice of America" program includes not only State Department radio broadcasts, the speaker pointed out. Nearly two thirds of the work is done in cooperation with American private concerns, such as the Institute of International Education for exchange of students and faculty between nations. So a big task of the "Voice" is to assist these groups.

American publishers, movie companies and other business enterprises also get support and help from the public affairs program, since private distribution of their products is practically impossible in poverty-stricken Europe.

ERP Action Urgent, Says Rep. Douglas

Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.) last night stressed the urgency of putting the European Recovery Program into immediate effect, in a dinner address at the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Outlining the purpose and provisions of the Marshall Plan, she said that the program was designed to help restore Great Britain and Europe as two great pillars of the civilized world. "Collapse of Great Britain and Europe would mean the collapse of the United Nations," she warned. "Then the balance of a united world would be lost.

"This program of planned United States aid has been offered to all Europe, including the Soviet Union," declared Representative Douglas. "Russia has refused to cooperate. Eastern Europe has followed her lead. The United States has not closed the door to them—but Europe cannot wait. The Marshall Plan is a program that will lend-lease for peace."

She pointed out that when we extended lend-lease during the war to save the world from conquest and oppression we did not know what Russia would do. "But we did not wait. We acted," she asserted. "Today we do not know what Russia will do and again we cannot wait."

Beauty Tip for Growing Girls

Poise Begins With Deep Breath, Says Slim, Lovely Opera Star

By Ida Jean Kain

Patrice Munsel, lovely young coloratura, has remarkable poise, but there's no pretense about her. Patrice is as natural as sunshine.

Take a deep breath, girls . . . we're going to find what it takes to walk onto a stage before a few thousand people with the poise of a princess. Our model is Patrice Munsel, and our story is about Patrice, the girl, not the opera star.

As you know, she sings like an angel, but I guess that takes more than deep breathing! The poise this young lady has developed isn't something you can catch in one easy lesson either, but it can be achieved, and even the practice is fun. The first ingredient is enthusiasm, you can't get anywhere without that. Patrice is in love with everything . . . with a song, with her audience, with life itself. She was quite weary the night I interviewed her, having returned late from singing for the boys in the Veterans Hospital in Baltimore, but when I told her I wanted a story for growing-up girls, she sat up eagerly and said she'd love that . . . it would be fun.

So here we go, across the ballroom, or the stage, in a manner of being born to the purple. "Take a deep breath when you enter a big room . . . that lifts you up." But let's stop and find how to take that breather . . . it's in the diaphragm, but the diaphragm must be pushed out as you breathe in. "Pulling in, which is all wrong, makes for stiffness and awkward movement. But if you expand the diaphragm on the inhalation, that buoys you up and lets you float into the room," beams Patrice.

"Tell the girls to get the feeling of pulling up away from the hipbones . . . the actual pull should be from there. Then for balance, make believe that someone is pulling on a string at the top of your head . . . that, with the deep breath, gives the feeling of floating."

You really can float, girls! Try it, and be surprised.

I asked her to give us a breathing exercise . . . an easy one. Raise arms slowly to shoulder level, to the count of 10, breathing in and pushing out with the diaphram; then slowly to the count of 10 exhale, pulling in with diaphragm. That breather will banish a flat chest and take the shrillness out of your voice at the same time.

Posture is everything! And for her posture, Patrice gives her mother all the credit. "She never once said 'Don't do this, and don't do that.' She had me take ballet dancing . . . that fixes everything." Patrice fervently wishes ballet or some form of rhythmic dancing could be taught in all the schools. Dancing makes all movement lovely and natural. "Of course, every movement can't be the grand gesture," she laughed.

Postures should always be the same, nice and straight, she says, but a girl's walk should fit what she's wearing. For example, when you have on a dress-up dress, live up to it—don't walk as if you had on a sweater and skirt or dungarees! Her favorite posture exercise is to stand against a wall, stretch up through the middle and get the small of the back snug against the wall, pulling up from the hipbones.

"This was such fun," she said as I left. "So many people only want to know the opera singer. That's what they look for—never the real me," she added wistfully.

That's a mistake. The real Patrice is so very nice you know.

It is fortunate for you that the episode transpired in your own bailiwick, where in a sense you've had the moral bulwark and tacit chaperonage of parents and small-town folk, all of whom are lifelong friends or acquaintances, I suppose. Had you come under his spell in other circumstances, divested of this social protection, you might at this point be in worse plight than his wife's, all due to his infantile rascality.

For advice: Listen to your parents and let them front for you in weeding him out of your life completely, because in sum total he is the sort who smirches and humiliates any girl who banks on him. M. H.

Mrs. Pottle Entertains At Afternoon Tea

CARDS SENT OUT by Mrs. Valentine Pottle to tea yesterday crossed in the mail with Senora Munilla's. The hours were different, however, and many of the guests who came to Mrs. Pottle's tea from 4 to 6 o'clock, later went on to Senora Munilla's at the Washington Club.

Mrs. Pottle's party was in honor of Mme. Alfred Sze, wife of the former Ambassador of China. Her guests included Mme. Senora de Munilla Entertains at Tea

CONVERSATION was at high pitch at Senora de Munilla's tea yesterday afternoon at the Washington Club as more than 200 ladies talked about spring, the fashions and the world situation over tea, coffee and punch.

The hostess had used spring flowers on the tea table and wore a spring frock of black crepe, brightened with a pattern of red and green flowers marching down the side of the bodice and long skirt. A spray of purple orchids was pinned to her shoulder.

decisions of the Security Council on the maintenance of peace and security in connection with the Palestine situation," and to "take the lead by announcing without delay what forces it would make available in conjunction with other members of the United Nations if and when the Security Council decides that the situation in Palestine warrants the use of armed force to maintain international peace and security."

Copies of the committee's resolution have been sent to President Truman, Secretary of State Marshall and to Warren R. Austin, head of the United States delegation to the United Nations.

In announcing the adoption of the resolution, Mrs. Whitehouse stated that the motion was the result of a statesmanlike working together of women of many faiths and points of view. "This resolution," she said, "expresses the firm belief of the WACLP in the necessity of using to the utmost the machinery provided by the United Nations in solving international problems, and the conviction that, through the strong leadership of the United States, this machinery can be strengthened to form a bulwark against war."

Change Shoes Often For Longer Wear And Better Health

There's more than just vanity involved in changing your shoes daily. There's good health and economy as well, according to foot specialists. Failure to change shoes regularly may lead not only to discomfort but actually to foot ailments and accompanying ills.

Muscles and bones of the feet are constantly creating heat as we go about our daily tasks. The pores of the foot, more numerous on the soles than anywhere else on the body, release moisture which must be passed off or become a source of irritation. Soggy tissues are an excellent breeding ground for germ life, particularly the fungus of athlete's foot.

Leather soles absorb perspiration and through their fibrous structure, pass it off to the outside air. In this manner the foot is kept ventilated.

To get the full benefits from your shoes it is wise, therefore, to give footwear a full day's rest on shoe trees between wearings. This will help the leather to act as a beneficial "air-conditioner" when it is on your feet. It has been found that shoes alternated daily last many times as long as those which are worn without change. Thus the pocketbook profits, as well as the health of the foot.

'Citizen' Broadcasts Begin

Thomas Jefferson Planned It That Way, Says Truman Of White House Balcony

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

CHATTING one day with Representative John McCormack, the House minority whip, President Truman remarked laughingly how he's been "catching it" because of "his" new White House balcony.

"The idea isn't mine, you know," concluded the President. "It's Thomas Jefferson's."

People forget that many-faceted Thomas Jefferson was our only architect President. He introduced the neoclassic style in this country, used it in the handsome buildings he designed—for instance, Monticello, his own home, and the Virginia State Capitol at Richmond, which is Jefferson's personal adaptation of an old Roman temple, the Maison Carre at Nimes.

Plans for the White House were chosen from those submitted in a competition. An Irish architect, Hoban, won out, but Jefferson's plans were very similar. His blueprints have been kept in the Congressional Library.

Checking to see if the balcony really was included, we were told the plans were drawn in such a way that it was impossible to tell. But undoubtedly the President is right. Anyway, it's an interesting angle!

"Citizen Broadcasts" to Italy

AS A GESTURE of friendship and reassurance to Italy and the Italians who have relatives and friends in this country, WRUL, a nonprofit, Government-owned short-wave station, is beaming a series of "citizen" broadcasts, starting this Sunday and ending April 18, the date of Italy's elections.

The program, at 2:15 p. m. Eastern standard time and 8:15 G. M. T. (when it can be received in Italy), is to consist of world news, personalities, interviews with prominent people.

The interviews will be translated into Italian by Mrs. John Davis Lodge, wife of the Connecticut Representative, who will also serve as mistress of ceremonies. Those who will appear—or be heard—include Drew Pearson, Ugo Carusi, Oscar Coxe, Marta Abba and innumerable others. Anyone with friends or relatives in Italy is urged to write or wire, ask them to listen in.

Incidentally, lovely Francesca Lodge lugs a small size suitcase wherever she goes. Curiosity getting the better of our manners, we persuaded her to let us open and itemize its contents. We found (1) a Drew Pearson broadcast she was about to translate into Italian; (2) an Italian dictionary; (3) an assortment of her husband's choicer oratorical bits; (4) a Nautch anklet studded with bells; (5) an unmentionable piece of lingerie; (5) ballet slippers; (6) a pair of long black woolen tights!

Thus combined were the varied interests of la belle Mrs. Lodge's life.

It's John G. Anderson

THERE are half a dozen John Andersons in the telephone book, but the president of the National Capital Kennel Club is John G. Anderson. His telephone number is Pleasant 0349. This is to help out the dozen or more dog-owners who called this department about registering their pets for the show April 3 and 4.

Help for the Hostess

TO HELP the harassed housewife, or rather the harassed hostess, the Department of Labor's employment service has come up with a brilliant idea. They've taken volunteers among the young World War II veterans attending local universities, given them specialized training as waiters and serving attendants. These young men have been taught all the niceties of serving for the most formal social entertainments. They're paid direct by the employer and there's no charge for the Government's service in placing them. A call to Mrs. Betty Place at the United States Employment Service, District 7000, should solve practically any entertaining problem.

Noted Audience Will See Film On Friendship

At the invitation of the National Friendship Train Committee, a distinguished audience will gather in the Warner Theater at 8:30 p. m tomorrow to view the Washington premier of the Italian film, "Thanks America," produced by the Italian people as a token of their appreciation of the Friendship Train.

Also to be shown is the film, "Friendship Train," a compilation of Warner-Pathe newsreel material shot from coast to coast from the inception of the food train to the loading at the New York shipping point for European distribution. The performance will last approximately one hour.

Those attending the event with guests will be Henri Bonnet, Ambassador from France, and members of his staff; Alberto Tarchiani, Italian Ambassador, and members of his staff; Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman; Secretary of the Interior Julius A. Krug; Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson; Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall; Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington; Attorney General Tom C. Clark; Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett; Assistant Secretaries of State Willard L. Thorp, John E. Peurifoy, Garrison Norton, Norman Armour and Charles E. Saltzman; Undersecretary of the Treasury Albert L. Wiggins; Undersecretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman; Assistant Attorney General David L. Bazelon; Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan;

Also Justices Frank Murphy, Wiley Rutledge and Harold Burton; Senator Arthur Vandenberg; Speaker of the House Joseph W. Martin; David K. Niles, administrative assistant to the President; Senators Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., Dennis Chavez, Clyde R. Hoey, Alexander Wiley, Allen J. Ellender, Owen Brewster, J. W. Fulbright, George A. Wilson, Claude Pepper, J. Howard McGrath, Scott W. Lucas, Edward J. Thye and Elbert D. Thomas; Representatives Francis Case, Mary T. Norton, Charles A. Halleck, John W. McCormack, Helen Gahagan Douglas and John Taber; Federal Communications Commissioner Clifford J. Durr; Leslie J. Biffle of the Senate Minority Policy Commission; Jean Dupard of the French Food Mission; Stephen Early, Thurman Arnold, Walter Lippmann, Leon Henderson and Oscar Cox. Drew Pearson and Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Bros., will attend as chairmen of the National Friendship Train Committee.

Cereal flakes that have been crushed may be tossed with melted butter or fortified margarine and grated cheese and used as a topping for a fish or vegetable casserole.

Many cooks like to brush a meat loaf with chili sauce before baking.

One of the best ways to use left-over pieces of roast meats is to grind it for hash or a meat pie. The pie may have either a baking powder biscuit, pastry or mashed potato crust.

Cuts suitable for lamb stew come from neck, shank, breast or shoulder. Lima beans, cauliflower parnsips and leeks, though not commonly used in lamb stew, add a great deal of flavor to it.

Vary cottage pudding on occasion by sprinkling the batter with coconut.

Sauces Add Flavor To Sweets, Meats

An excellent pudding sauce may be made by blending a half cup of tart red jelly or jam with two tablespoons of hot water, a teaspoon of lemon juice and a dash of salt. If jam with seeds is used the mixture should be strained before serving.

Spanish sauce is made by sauteeing chopped onion, celery and green pepper in a small amount of fat and then simmering with a few cups of cooked or canned tomatoes. After the sauce is seasoned with salt and pepper, and just before serving, sliced stuffed olives may be added if desired.

Baby's Formula

Where there is a bottle-fed baby, the formula should be written out and thumb-tacked about the place where the bottles, nipples, etc., are kept. Then if mother is suddenly called away, there will be no change in baby's food, causing further upset.

Warm Nightclothes Protect Restless Baby

If you have a restless baby who seems to be able to get out of his covers no matter how you pin him in, dress him more warmly for bed and stop worrying about his outside covers. Besides his wooly night suit let him wear a warm shirt underneath or a sweater on the outside. Then those kicked-off covers will not matter so much.

For Dry Stuffing

After cleaning and washing out the inside of the turkey or chicken, let it drain thoroughly while making the dressing. Then before the dressing is put in the fowl, wipe out the inside with paper napkins until it is perfectly dry. Then put in the dressing and you will find it will not be soggy around the places where it has touched the carcass of the fowl but an even dryness throughout.

stop in the middle of it. Table number two must start singing where number one left off. If they can't, they are eliminated and number three tries. When one table completes a song, the next table starts a new one, continuing on in above fashion. This can be continued until all but one table is eliminated. Simple prizes, such as lollypops, can be awarded to the persons at the winning table.

Will you advise me as to the best procedure for cleaning dirty hardwood floors prior to using an electric floor waxer? I would appreciate your suggestions as to what kind of wax, paste, or liquid, is the most efficient.
F. E. H.

If the floor was previously waxed, dirt and old wax can be removed by wiping it with a liquid floor wax. Or, one of the soapless detergent products and water can be used to clean the floor. This will not require the rinsing that soap does nor leave a white film. Many dry-cleaning preparations that can be used to clean floors present a definite fire hazard. However, those of the kerosene-base type can be used with fair safety if pains are taken to avoid risk. All electrical appliances should be disconnected, no matches should be struck, etc., until the cleaner dries thoroughly. Carbon tetrachloride is a noninflammable dry cleaner that can be used, but fumes from it are injurious and it can also prove harmful if absorbed through the skin. Wear rubber gloves and leave windows open for good ventilation when using it.

When the floor is clean and dry, apply a thin coat of paste wax, allow time for it to dry, then buff well with an electric buffer. It is wise when all of the wax has been removed from the floor to apply several coats, buffing well after each application to build up a good coating.

I suggest using paste wax where you wish to build up a good coat of wax resistant to wear. Also, with paste wax you can achieve a higher shine.

Scouts React In 'Chain' Like Atoms

Newspaper Contest Led Sousa to Write Famous Composition

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

You might call it chain reaction—and in a way it is atomic.

But there is nothing explosive about it, and it's only atomic because each of us is made up of atoms by the thousands.

This type of chain reaction is what is set in motion when a boy decides he wants to be a Scout. Because when he starts in as a cub, his mother and father learn about scouting, too. And as he moves up to membership in a Scout troop, he comes in contact with other boys who have pledged themselves to follow the Scout law, and with men who, as good citizens, have volunteered to lead Scout troops in the multitude of activities which they undertake.

Washington has a particular interest in the Boy Scout movement, for it was a group of Washingtonians who, together with William D. Boyce, Chicago publisher, arranged incorporation of the Scouts in America in 1910.

And the avowed purpose of the group then, as now, is to teach boys "through duly designated leaders, discipline, patriotism, courage, habits of preservation and self-control and ability to care for themselves in all exigencies of life."

This fundamental aim has been distilled and diffused among thousands of boys since the organization was founded in this country soon after the turn of the century. It became obvious in World War II that scouting had influenced the lives of about 25 per cent of the men in the United States armed forces; such men as Cmdr. John D. Bulkley, PT boat squadron leader who rescued General MacArthur at Corregidor; Capt. Colin P. Kelley, USAAF, first air hero of the Pacific; Gen. Mark W. Clark, former Scout leader.

But there were thousands of Boy Scouts who served in World War II without firing a gun or donning their country's uniform. These were the youths who, at home, helped the civilian war effort by collecting aluminum and paper for salvage, by taking orders for war bonds, by assisting with playground and recreation programs, and in food production and conservation.

All these things, even regardless of patriotism, were designed to teach the boys to "do things for themselves and others."

And now that the war is over, Boy Scout leaders are concentrating on expanding their activities to include still more for the youth of this generation and generations to come—not to prepare for war, but to build a better citizenry in a peaceful land.

In Washington, the organization is kept active with approximately 500 units meeting each week. Between three and four thousand volunteer Scout leaders aid in the work here, and there are now about 12,000 boys who are members of cub packs or troops in the National Capital area.

Howard R. Seitz, assistant director of Boy Scout headquarters here, points out that this area's biggest problem in scouting is provision of enough camping facilities. Camp Theodore Roosevelt can accommodate 2400 boys during the camping season; and although Scout cubs don't go to camp, there still is need for enough facilities to provide for about 4500 boys, plus perhaps 2500 who will be added to the program within the forseeable future.

And each of the boys already in the program, or who will join the program here in Washington, takes this oath as he becomes a Scout:

"On my honor, I will do my best—

To do my duty to God and my Country, and to obey the Scout Law;

To help other people at all times;

To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight."

A newspaper-sponsored essay contest for school children led to the composing of one of the world's best known marches—"The Washington Post."

The story, recalled by many readers in connection with The Washington Post's seventieth anniversary December 6, dates back to 1889 when John Philip Sousa was 35 years old and had been leader of the United States Marine Band nine years.

As Sousa later recalled it:

"One morning in 1889 I met Gen. Frank Hatton, one of the proprietors of The Washington Post on the street, and he told me that a contest they were having for the best essays among the public school children had assumed such proportions that they had requested the Government to give them Smithsonian grounds as the place to confer prizes on the successful ones, and he said, of course it would be a great thing if The Washington Post could have the Marine Band.

Band Sent to Play

"I suggested that he request the Secretary of the Navy to order the band to appear and give a concert during the ceremonies, and we received an order from the Secretary to that effect.

"A few days later I met General Hatton and Beriah Wilkins, another owner of The Washington Post, and they confirmed the order of the Secretary that I would appear, and one of them said it would be a great thing if I would write a special march for that occasion, to which I immediately agreed, and the first performance of 'The Washington Post March' was at this event at Smithsonian grounds."

Six acres of faces, about 25,000 children and adults, had jammed the grounds the afternoon of June 15, 1889, when the Rev. Dr. Corey stepped forward and bowed his head for the prayer, thereby bringing order in the crowd.

After the prayer, Wilkins said, "The Marine Band will now play a march composed by Professor Sousa and dedicated to The Washington Post."

Musical History

The announcement was greeted with applause, and the march was generously applauded by the crowd who had come to see prizes awarded to the amateur authors and were unwittingly present at the making of musical history.

The paper reported the march as "a light and melodious composition" and "being good." A staff member who was a personal friend of the march king's and heard him play it on the piano before its public premiere, recalled years later that he had "recognized nothing catchy in it at all" at the time.

Within a year, however, "The Washington Post March" started sweeping the country, both as a march and as a two-step. Its popularity grew steadily, abetted by the dancing masters, who found it a vehicle to promote revival of the ballroom step.

When Sousa toured Germany in 1900 he often had to play the march as many as six times during a single concert to satisfy demands for "Der Vashington Pust."

Played All Over World

European composers called their compositions "Washington Posts" instead of two-steps. The march was popular in probably all the cities of the world and was heard being played by a native boy in the recesses of the Borneo jungle.

"It still retains its popularity," Sousa said in 1927, "and I have every reason to believe it will continue to do so.

"Heaven alone knows how many million copies were sold, because I was so indifferent to monetary matters in my younger days that I virtually gave it to a publisher for the magnificent sum of $35, but as it has given much joy to many, I feel that is some pay for my efforts."

Lecture Clinics On Taxes Planned

A new series of "lecture-clinics" on tax problems of District Federal taxpayers will get under way March 29 under sponsorship of the bar association.

The program, consisting of 12 two-hour sessions, will be given at the United States Chamber of Commerce, 1615 H st. nw. Classes end June 14.

Sessions will open with a discussion by George Maurice Morris, former American Bar Association president, on planning taxpayers' affairs. Veterans may attend the course under the GI Bill of Rights. Registrar is John C. Poole, 1719 I st. nw.

THAT SPRING FEVER: June Allyson and Van Johnson in their picnic scene for "The Bride Goes Wild," the new comedy at the Palace

Good Stage Bill, Too

Wilde's 'Ideal Husband' Given Excellent Treatment in Film

By Orval Hopkins

OSCAR WILDE'S "An Ideal Husband" opened yesterday at the Capitol, and is so completely satisfactory that I'm almost at a loss for words. In fact, the entire bill at the Capitol, excepting one or two minor soft spots, is good entertainment and worth your time.

Alexander Korda has produced and directed the captivating Wilde comedy, and he has been provided with what I should term a nearly flawless script by Lajos Biros. Paulette Goddard caught this bureau dead flatfooted by delivering a heady, convincing portrayal as Mrs. Cheveley, and Miss Goddard was in some very fast company. Michael Wilding played Lord Goring and one assumes, as one does with a Wilde work, that this is the author writing himself into the play. Wilding handles the assignment in thoroughly competent fashion.

Diana Wynyard as Lady Chiltern comes very close to walking away with acting honors for the piece, but this can in no way be construed as a reflection on the high caliber of work done by Glynis Johns, a delightful young lady I never heard of but whom it would be nice to see again; by Sir C. Aubrey Smith, who outdoes himself, if this be thinkable, as Lord Caversham, and by Hugh Williams as Sir Robert Chiltern.

Story of Blackmail

The story is the neatly plotted one of a young divorcee who comes to town with blackmail in her heart and seeks to maneuver a high British official, by raking up an incident of his past, into publicly supporting a scheme which he believes to be a swindle. The lady is checkmated when an error of her own past fortuitously rears its hideous head, and her final attempt to trample down the official's life goes awry when she drops the ball, as our friends in sports say, at the crucial point.

All this unfolds briskly and with complete credibility. It is abetted, I suppose, by the renowned Wilde epigrams, some of which have been so kicked around that they have taken on a sort of Joe Miller appearance. There's the one, for example, in which Smith says, "People simply stand about and talk about nothing." To which Wilding replies, "I like to talk about nothing. It's the only thing I know anything about." Or this one: "Do you ever understand what you're saying?" "Sometimes—if I listen carefully."

This, of course, enhances, if anything, the general excellence of this production, though I must say that it seemed at times as if the elegant ghost of Oscar Wilde must be standing by as a sort of otherworld prompter as each player assumed his or her position and delivered one of these deathless aphorisms. Let it be said they were delivered, without exception, with skill and understanding.

A Credit for Oscar

Though it needed little improving, the film was made more pleasing by some excellent Technicolor camera work which seemed to catch precisely the flavor of Victorian London, with its beautiful horses, its swaying carriages and its upper case Society of lavishly dressed men and women living for the most part not by, but for, their wits. Korda has done well with this. So have Miss Goddard and the others of this fine cast. Oscar Wilde deserves some credit, too.

Sam Jack Kaufman is back slaving over that hot orchestra at the Capitol, and Kay DeWitt is with him, h. h. h.

On the stage are the Robert Sisters and White, a reasonably good dance team; Bedell and Mattson in what I thought was a very funny mimicry act; Johnny Burke, "soldier-comedian from the draft of 1917," some of whose jokes go back even farther than that, and Dolinoff and the Raya Sisters, some dancers in pretty costumes.

"THE BRIDE GOES WILD." M-G-M release produced by William H. Wright. Screen play by Albert Beich. Directed by Norman Taurog. Photographed by Ray June. Music by Rudolph G. Kopp. At the Palace.

'Bride' Requires Lots of Company

By Richard L. Coe

THE MANAGERS HAVE AN interesting custom of not showing comedies at the morning sessions for the town's film reviewers. We see a good many pictures in the noncrowded screening rooms, but most of the comedies they prefer us to see with theater audiences.

This reporter feels that the managerial viewpoint is absurd. A good comedy is as good a comedy for four people as it is for 1400. At least theoretically.

But a picture like "The Bride Goes Wild," at the Palace, is a good example of the managerial viewpoint. It was given a sneak preview here a few weeks ago and the reports of our spies were bright. So the other day—after a good breakfast—your reporter settled back to laugh at Van Johnson, June Allyson and "The Bride Goes Wild."

I wish I could say I laughed merrily at the many moments which were intended to be funny; I did laugh once in a while, but not nearly enough. The picture struck me as being tedious, long-winded and painfully anxious to be cute. All through it I kept thinking of that old rhyme: "I do not like thee, Dr. Fell; the reason why I cannot tell."

A little investigation at the Palace yesterday showed that, just as veteran director Norman Taurog had planned, audiences were laughing at those same stretches that had us thinking about Dr. Fell. While I still think that a good comedy is just as good for four people as it is for 1400, "The Bride Goes Wild" is certainly what the moguls call an "audience picture."

The Tipsy Uncle Bump

The comedy presents Van as a writer of juvenile stories—"Uncle Bump," they call him—and he's supposed to have a terrific pull with the kiddies through his animal yarns. June plays a Vermont teacher who wins a contest to illustrate Uncle Bump's latest book.

Away from his typewriter, Uncle Bump is a "Lost Weekend" type. He drinks in the morning, ogles the girls and hates children. To a Vermonter like June he's a shocking type, but you shouldn't have to be told that there's a Wonderful Bond between them.

How they get together depends on a youngster from an orphanage who Van's publisher (Hume Cronyn) thinks will soften June's attitude toward Uncle Bumps. With Butch Jenkins to play this part, the role has an effective appeal. Butch has a scrappy nature, but that's just because he's lonely and nobody loves him.

Directed by Taurog

The yarn is told in broadly slapstick terms and it's this, more than anything else, which makes audiences laugh. There's a good finale sequence in which Butch delays June's marriage to the wrong man with the use of ants on the wedding guests.

So I see no point in gnashing my molars at "The Bride Goes Wild." My guileless innocence, alas, is fled, and I have in its place only a dash of envy for the young in heart.

THE METROPOLITAN shifted its booking charts to make way for "Saigon," the Alan Ladd-Veronica adventure which moved over right after its week at the Warner . . . Next Thursday, the Met will offer a double bill that sounds on the odd side, topped by a film with a cast of birds, yes, birds . . . This finds trained creatures playing a story called "Bill and Coo," produced by Ken Murray . . . "Under California Stars," with Roy Rogers and Trigger, is the companion film . . . After that will come "Relentless," with Robert Young in his first Western role . . . What are Young and Rod Cameron trying to do? Ease Randolph Scott out of his niche as the Met's open-king?

S-I-E J-N-S and his C-t-S-l-k-r will be taking tonight off from their "Musical Depreciation Revue" at the National for their weekly CBS broadcast . . . S—K—and the boys go on the air (WTOP) at 10:30 for the broadcast from the National, but they lock the doors at 10:20, so if you're lucky enough to have tickets better get there around 10 . . . The Maestro is meeting disc jockeys and reporters of the local schools this afternoon at the theater, so it's a busy day for the foghorns . . . Note: CBS has no tickets; these have been distributed by the pause that refreshes.

"AN IDEAL HUSBAND." 20th Century-Fox release, produced and directed by Alexander Korda. Screen play by Lajos Biro from the Oscar Wilde play. Music by Arthur Benjamin played by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra. Technicolor photography by Georges Perinal. Costumes by Cecil Beaton. Sets by Vincent Korda. At the Capitol.

Two Petitions For Rezoning Turned Down

Opposition from residents and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission prompted rejection of two rezoning petitions by the Prince Georges County Commissioners at a public hearing in the County Service Building at Hyattsville Wednesday.

The commissioners rejected the applications of Daisy L. Lenhardt for permission to construct apartments on a 10-acre tract on Hamilton st. near West Hyattsville, and William R. Ford, for commercial use of a site near East-West hwy. in Takoma Park, adjacent to the New Hampshire View apartment development.

In other actions, the commissioners approved two requests for commercial rezoning, one for industrial use and two for construction of two-family dwellings. Action on three other petitions was continued until April 21.

Children to Help Demonstrate Color-Voice Speech Machine

AID FOR HARD OF HEARING—An instructor demonstrates to three children the "Chromovox," a machine that combines color and voice to teach and improve speech of the hard of hearing. It will be tested here tonight at the Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing

A new machine to teach and improve speech of the hard of hearing and the vocally deficient will be demonstrated here tonight.

The instrument, called a "Chromovox," will be put to test on crippled and partially deaf children at 8 p. m. at headquarters of the Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing. Demonstrator will be its inventor, Herman R. Goldberg, instructor at the New York Day School for Deaf and Hard of Hearing.

Combines Color, Voice

Combining color and voice, as its name implies, it uses many of the traditional principles of such teaching. But where normal methods employ color cards picked up and displayed by hand, the "Chromovox" speeds up the process with electrically-flashed color disks.

Principal advantage of the instrument, said its inventor, is that it speeds up synchronization of sound and vision. With manually-operated systems, speech teachers point out, the pupil tends to long pauses or breathing between enunciation of syllables.

Microphone Used

With the "Chromovox," the teacher speaks through a microphone and her words are carried through earphones to the pupil. At the same time, she controls movement of a printed tape of illustrated words she is teaching. A movement of the finger controls the colored "mistake windows" which flash warning to the pupil that he used the wrong sound type in his pronunciation.

Participating in tonight's demonstration will be children from the Crippled Children's Society, the Kendall School for the Deaf here, and the Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing.

5-8% Rent Hikes Recommended For 174 Flats

Rent increases ranging from 5 to 8 per cent were recommended by District Rent Control Administration examiners Wednesday for 174 units in two Northwest area apartment houses.

Examiner James G. Tyson recommended a 7.37 per cent hike for 87 units of the Swarthmore, 1010 25th st. nw. It would boost 2-room-and-bath units from $37.50 to $40.50 a month, 3-room-and-bath apartments from $67.50 to $72.50. The petition filed by B. F. Saul Co. sought a 13.66 per cent rise.

A 5.13-per-cent boost was recommended by Examiner Denis K. Lane for 87 units of the Westview, 2123 I st. nw. One-room and bath units would go up from $26.50 to $28, 3-room-and-bath apartments from $57.50 to $60.50. The petition filed by Iola L. Brawner asked for a 1199 per cent boost.

Waterway Parley To Hear Talks by 5 Congressmen

Five Congressmen will speak at the opening session of the two-day annual convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress at 10 a. m. today at the Mayflower Hotel.

Scheduled to speak before more than 200 representatives of national, state and local waterway groups are Representatives Homer D. Angell (R., Oreg.), Thomas A. Jenkins, (R., Ohio), Harve Tibbott (R., Pa.) and Earl Wilson (R., Ind.), and Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.).

Lieut. Gen. Raymond A. Wheeler, chief of engineers, United States Army, will speak on "Our National Rivers, Harbors and Flood Control Program" at the 1:30 p. m. session tomorrow.

On the Town

THE opening-night crowd in the Mayflower lounge was more enthusiastic than we've seen a Washington audience for some time . . . Applause was divided between Pierson Thal, the pianist who goes easily from Grieg to Gershwin, and Florence and Frederic, a skillful dance team from Paris . . . They perform their different, and in some cases difficult, steps with an accomplished ease and grace . . . For our money, Florence and Frederic are one of the best entertainment bets of the week.

Chio
At Balalaika

The Balalaika is well enough pleased with the singing and dancing efforts of Chio to hold her over for a time. Chio looks like a China doll in costume when she sings her song . . . After the song she drops the coat and becomes sylphlike in a revealing costume of flowing white while she does her dance . . . The opening number at the Balalaika provides a laugh with a twist at the end when members of the cast put their heads and arms through holes in a painted backdrop and sing a Russian hunting song . . . At the end of the song a dog at the bottom of the backdrop suddenly comes to life, much to the surprise of the patrons . . . This number is put on only a few times each year and is worth seeing.

JERRY WALD and his Orchestra have taken over for Helen Forrest at Club Kavakos . . . Jerry is one of the younger leaders in the country and is well on his way up the ladder.

Mary Harris, who used to night club here, dropped a line to say she had run into Helen Hamilton and hubby Frank Steinberg . . . Helen was the owner of the Troika during the lush war years . . . The couple and their children are now living in Florida . . . Steinberg had this message for all the old patrons of the Troika, "Tell everyone that there's nothing to the story about Helen buying Kitty Davis' Airliner. She's very happy living quietly. I've stopped being Mr. Helen Hamilton and she's decided to be Mrs. Frank Steinberg."

After breaking a whole stack of house records, the DeMarcos will be heading back to the Shoreham Blue Room for another engagement . . . If you want to see them, start arranging your reservations, but quick!

Collingwood, the restaurant mansion on the Potomac, will be opening for the season a week from tomorrow . . . It features choice cuts of beef, spoon bread and Southern pecan pies . . . The terrace will, of course, be open for those who enjoy dinner overlooking the river.

A number of people have called asking where they might go for an evening of entertainment on a limited budget . . . We'd like to say that anytime you get stuck for a spot to go to just drop a line or call us and we'll be glad to help you out.

Stephen Iles, in the Roger Smith Cafe Caprice, is gathering quite a following with his smooth piano stylings . . . he is scheduled to stay with the room until the opening of the roof this June.

A number of Washington institutions were named beneficiaries in the will of Miss Mary Patton Godding, water color artist, who died here February 21.

Miss Godding's estate was valued at $77,000. The petition said she was also "entitled" to the estate of her late brother, Alvah Godding, former superintendent of gorunds at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, who died last May leaving $74,000.

After $75,000 of Miss Godding's estates is disposed of in bequests to three cousins and a number of friends, the residue of the estates is to go to the Children's Hospital, Central Union Mission, Washington Home for Incurables and the All Souls' Unitarian

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Greatest of Ease

The daring young women in our show float thru their acts with the greatest of ease. With no talent, no training and no effort they've kept the Oasis internationally famous for the world's worst show—the world's best time.

Here's an Explanation—"Chest" In Case You Wondered

The strange antics of the "chestometer" displayed on a Post Square billboard had me baffled for a time.

The chestometer is supposed to record the number of free chest X-rays which have been taken in the city's current campaign.

During the early days of the drive the red neon "mercury" quickly shot from zero up to about 125,000. But it stopped there for the longest time, and I began to wonder whether the X-ray campaign had fizzled.

Then the red light jumped overnight, from 125,000 to 250,000, and I just had to find out what had happened.

Investigation reveals that the red neon light is extended upward by the progressive removal of more and more of the tape which originally covered the entire tube.

But after 125,000 Washingtonians had gotten their chests X-rayed the removal of additional tape became something of a problem. It was out of the reach of a man standing on tip-toe.

So there was a long delay during which the "mercury" remained stationary and the wisecrackers suggested such solutions as hiring Bones McKinney or the giant in the Spike Jones show.

The crisis was finally met when somebody rounded up a stepladder and tore off enough tape to permit the red light to climb to the current 250,000 mark.

PIED TYPE DEPT.

Charlie Tait of Winchester, Va., calls our attention to a Washington Post story about Joe Judge. The item said:

"When he discovered life doesn't begin at 40, Judge had amassed a lifetime batting average of .297 in 210 big league seasons. 'Those last few years pull you down', Joe apologized."

Comments District Liner Tait: "After 210 years in the big time, it's small wonder the guy slowed up."

FAIR TODAY

Woodrow Wilson High School will hold its annual County Fair from 3 to 5 p. m. today in its two gyms. There'll be dancing in the armory.

Included on the program are variety shows, puppets, "horror houses," contests, prizes—and food.

The school is one block from Tenley Circle, at Chesapeake st. and Nebraska ave. Everybody is invited to attend, and you can't find a worthier cause.

In 1943, a woman who had returned from abroad told the folks at Wilson about some of the things she had seen. She urged them to "adopt" a war orphan.

They did, and staged their first County Fair to raise funds for the child's support. With this afternoon's fair they hope to raise more than 1500 bucks, because Wilson's foster parenthood has now grown to include six orphans in England, Holland and France.

Your attendance today will help to care for one of those innocent victims of war.

JUMPY FILMS

We recently wondered why movies in suburban theaters are often so jumpy. Hollis Leith of Martinsburg, W. Va., says:

"As a former Army projectionist, I can shed a little light on the subject. The splices are usually due to sloppy handling by the operators of the various theaters.

"Sometimes a dirty projector scratches the film so badly that it has to be cut out. And when the film is threaded into the projector improperly, it tears the sprocket holes and a splice has to be made.

"Careful handling all along the line would help to eliminate this annoying situation, and give the customers a smoother show."

SIMPLIFIED GEOGRAPHY

Robert W. Livingston of 1711 Edgewood st., Arlington, Va., tells an unusual story that dates back to the Dakotas of 40 years ago.

One day Bob took a long horseback trip with some local cow hands. When the party came to a little stream, the cowboys identified it as Finnegan Creek.

When they reached a second stream nearby, the natives said, "This one is Wannigan Creek."

The party returned home several days later over the same ground, and of course the two creeks were crossed in reverse order. So Bob was startled to hear one of the natives say:

"Well, here's good old Finnegan Creek again."

"You mean Wannigan Creek, don't you?" corrected Bob.

"No," replied the cowboy in all earnestness, "we call the first one we come to 'Finnegan' regardless of which way we're headed."

DEFINITION

A "party" is a place at which
We find some folks who pall us.
And for example take the one
That's run by Henry Wallace.

NEW YORK.—The Marquis de Cuevas, whose Grand Ballet de Monte Carlo is in Paris, was approached by a committee organized to help the Navajo Indians. "But I help the Indians," the Marquis assured them. "My two prima ballerinas, Rosella Hightower and Marjorie Tallchief, are both from Oklahoma and both have Indian blood" . . . "But we're concerned about the average Navajos," the committee members told him . . . "If you want to send me other Indian ballerinas, that is fine," replied the Marquis de Cuevas. "But at the present moment I cannot help the Indians who do not dance very well."

ENTERPRISE: Now that the British film-tax problem has been settled Frank Ross expects to proceed with his long-delayed project for bringing "The Robe" to the screen. Ross engaged William Ihnen, the art director, to build some expensive models of the sets to be used . . . Sig Rogell, who produces "B" pictures at RKO, studied the set models and asked Ross: "When you're through with them I'd like to use them for the 'Falcon in Jerusalem.'"

POLITICS: This is an indication of the change in the political scene: A man who was a Roosevelt New Dealer is about to become the publisher of a newspaper in California. "I'm going to make mine a liberal paper," he said in Sardi's last night. "The opposition paper is reactionary one, and I'll fight it with liberalism. The opposition prints at least three anti-Truman editorials every day. I'll print only one."

ANALYSIS: Dr. A. A. Brill, the psychoanalyst who died a few days ago, often went to Madison Square Garden to see the fights. Oscar Levant saw him at the Apostoli-Steele fight, which was stopped by the referee in the ninth round and was awarded to Apostoli—although Steele hadn't been floored . . . "This puzzles me," Levant said to Dr. Brill. "How could Steele stay on his feet, despite such a terrific beating? Why didn't Steele go down?" . . . "I'll tell you exactly why," Dr. Brill told him. "He didn't want to."

Soviet 'Germ Weapon' Reported

By Drew Pearson

Here are some of the worries behind President Truman's message to Congress:

Worry No. 1—News of Russian germ - warfare plans.

Pearson

Soviet scientists are reported to have developed two types of virus, one to wipe out cattle, the other to spread pestilence among humans.

Actually, Russian progress on bacteriological warfare is no news to United States war chiefs.

It was also long known that the Russians were working on inoculation for their own troops, so they could advance into enemy territory immune to disease germs after the enemy had been knocked out by bacteriological warfare.

This was known to be Russia's cheap answer to the atomic bomb, since germ warfare can be prepared in small, inexpensive laboratories.

Russo-German State

Worry No. 2—Russia is reported to have completed plans for setting up a brand-new Soviet-German government on or before May 1. The new capital would be at Koenigsberg, and the government would be under Field Marshal Von Paulus, German commander taken prisoner at Stalingrad and since then engaged in training a special German army for Russia.

Von Paulus is reported to have returned to Moscow March 4 following a seven-week tour of Russian-occupied Germany. The tour was for the purpose of working out details of the new Soviet-German government.

Von Paulus' German unit of the Red Army was reported two months ago to total one million, is now believed to total 1,600,000.

The Russians take extreme precautions to prevent this German army from double-crossing them. The families of Von Paulus and 35 of his staff officers are kept in Moscow as hostages. Von Paulus' army is also denied artillery. Ammunition is carefully rationed, with no large ammunition depots inside Germany.

Other Worries—Russian troop maneuvers in and around Germany; also the Russian grab for more and more territory for the purpose of isolating Moscow from United States long-range bombers and the atomic bomb. The more territory Russia takes, the farther away our bases must be.

End of Russia's Rope

Strategy behind the President's message to Congress was not entirely worry. It was partly for the psychological effect on (1) Russia, (2) on the countries Russia seeks to dominate.

Diplomats have long believed that if Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister in 1914, had warned the Kaiser that the invasion of Belgium meant war with Britain, the Kaiser would not have struck.

Diplomats have also believed that if Hitler had definitely known the invasion of Poland meant war with both Britain and the United States of America he might not have struck.

Therefore, United States war chiefs have been advising that Russia should be told that she has now gone as far as she can without a direct clash with the United States.

The psychological effect of a firm stand on Italy, Scandinavia and France is also considered important. The Czech coup has caused them to cringe with fright. Italian voters have been terrorized with the threat that the Communists were preparing a purge list of those who opposed them, and that the Russians were soon coming in to make that purge effective.

Note 1—Talking to Senators the other day, Secretary of State Marshall urged passage of military training because of its psychological effect on Russia. Senators countered that a big airplane program would have greater effect. Marshall replied that planes would take too long to build.

Note 2—In 1940, Marshall, then Chief of Staff and never air-minded, asked Congress for only six Flying Fortresses. And this was after Poland was invaded!

Navy's White Elephants

When high-up United States air officers really let their hair down, they are scathing in their criticism of a big land army and of Navy blueprints for giant airplane carriers.

Carriers, they point out, not only take two years and tremendous quantities of steel to build, but are white elephants. It takes too many warships to protect them, and they are knocked out for keeps if they get anywhere near an atomic bomb.

Many people wondered why the battleship Pennsylvania was towed out to sea and sunk when the Nation was desperately short of scrap iron. The reason—radioactivity. Nearly two years after Bikini, battleships from Bikini are still contaminated by deadly radioactive fumes.

Thus, if an atomic bomb comes anywhere near an airplane carrier, that giant mass of steel requiring two years and 100 million dollars to build is knocked permanently out of commission.

Air generals also smile over the fact that their branch of the service has no trouble getting plenty of recruits. Neither do the Marines. It's the land Army which has trouble in getting men.

Planes in Moth Balls

Army Air Forces now have 1500 B-29's in "cocoons"—a type of mothball storage—ready for almost immediate action. Another 1000 B-29's are kept in less permanent storage, could be greased and ready for flight in a matter of hours. In addition, there is a much smaller number of B-29's (the exact number is secret) in actual operation.

The B-29 has an official range of 1700 miles—or 3400 miles counting the return trip. Actually, however, it can fly twice that far when not heavily loaded.

The newer B-36 has an official range of 5000 miles, or 10,000 miles round trip. But this can be stretched under actual flying conditions.

However, we have only 100 B-36's on order—a pitifully small number in case of war.

As to the $64 question: Could we drop an atomic bomb on Moscow, the answer is yes— though it would be a hazardous mission.
